THREE COLBY COLLEGE STUDENTS BURNED TO DEATH

TRAPPED IN FIRE IN FRAT HOUSE

Revere Boy Is One of the Victims; Others Narrowly Escape Death

Waterville, Me., Dec. 4.—Three students were burned to death and other students of Colby College here were driven from their fraternity houses early today when fire, starting from undetermined origin, swept the Lamba Phi Alpha fraternity house.

THE DEAD

Warren L. Frye, Revere, Mass.

Alton L. Andrews, Northport, Me.

Carl M. Treworgy, Surry, Me.

Most of the damage was confined to the Lamba Chi Alpha Society house, but the flames spread with such rapidity that the voluntary fire department were unable to cope with it and the Delta Upsilon clubhouse was badly damaged.

About thirty members of the Upsilon fraternity, who were sleeping in the main sleeping room of the clubhouse, fled by the fire escapes as did twenty-eight others at the Lamda Chi Alpha Society.

The three victims, Andrews, Frye and Treworgy, met death in their own rooms. Their bodies were so badly burned that identification was difficult. The bodies were removed from the shell of the fraternity house and taken to a local undertaking establishment, where former friends of the trio passed before the bodies. It required at least half an hour to make identification certain.

COMRADES WEEP.

Many of the students were visibly touched by the scene presented by the charred bodies of their former college pals. A few wept.

Nobody at the college knows exactly how the fire started. President Arthur J. Roberts declared to a Boston American reporter that the whole building was aflame when he was roused from his sleep.

The firemen were reported to have

SENATE BLOCKS BUTLER

Confirmation to the Supreme Court Held Up by Opposition of La Follette

Washington, Dec. 4 (By International News Service).—Confirmation by the Senate of the nomination of Pierce Butler, St. Paul lawyer, as associate justice of the U. S. Supreme Court, was blocked today by an objection raised in the Senate by Senator La Follette, Republican, of Wisconsin.

The nomination will die automatically with the closing of the special session of Congress shortly before noon today, and must be sent to the Senate again by President Harding when the last session of the 67th Congress is actually under way.

The Senate was in closed executive session when La Follette's objection stopped further consideration of the Butler nomination.

ACTION IS POSTPONED.

A statement opposing Mr. Butler's confirmation, filed recently with the Judiciary Committee, was referred to by Senator La Follette, and he was joined by Senator Norris in demanding that the persons making the statement be given a hearing. Under these circumstances the leaders decided to attempt no action today.

The statement filed with the committee related to Mr. Butler's alleged connection with railroads and other corporations and also with political leaders in his home city.

1,700 ARE CONFIRMED.

After passing over Mr. Butler's nomination, the Senate confirmed about 1,700 other appointments, including 1,500 army officers. Among the latter were seven major and eleven brigadier-generals, and about 600 officers of lower grades.

Among the nominations confirmed was that of Miss Lucile Atcherson of Columbus, Ohio, to be secretary of legation. She is the first woman ever appointed to the diplomatic corps.

POLICE SEIZE STILL IN ROXBURY RAID

Raiding police officers today swooped down on No. 31 Devon street, Roxbury, and there arrested Samuel Rosenberg, nineteen, of No. 31 Newton street, Malden, and seized a distilling outfit.

Included in the seizure were two 100-gallon stills, four gas stoves, 100 gallons of liquor, 1,800 pounds of sugar, fifty pounds of malt, 150 pounds of yeast and 1,860 gallons of mash. Police are seeking the owners of the building.

THREAT TO SET FIRE BRINGS FIREMEN

Engine 1 clanged its way to Allston street, Somerville, to the home of Mrs. Ellen O'Donnell. Hysterically, Mrs. O'Donnell said there was no fire and told how a drunken man had threatened to burn her house because she refused him admittance. A neighbor who heard the threat pulled in the alarm.

Patrolman Crossman found just outside William F. Norton, Jr., of Spring street, Waltham. He was sentenced to thirty days by Judge Sturtevant today and appealed.

AGREE ON PLAN TO ATTACK DAUGHERTY

Washington, Dec. 4 (By International News Service).—The charges of unfitness and malfeasance against Attorney-General Harry M. Daugherty will be given a thorough airing. The Judiciary Committee decided today in agreeing to ask the House as a whole for authority to subpena witnesses and documents and conduct public hearings.

A tentative agreement was reached to begin the hearings on December 12 on the first of the charges that the Attorney-General had failed to prosecute trusts and corporations for violations of the Sherman law. The charges were made by Keller Republican, of Minnesota.

The witnesses to be summoned are Donald Richberg, a Chicago attorney, and a lawyer named Stevenson of Cleveland.

6,000 TONS OF COAL AT $14.50 ON SALE

More than 300 orders for the semi-anthracite coal to be placed on sale by the city, some by letter, others by telephone and in person, were received today by Joshua Jones in charge of the municipal coal office in City Hall.

The coal will be placed on sale tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock. The cost will be $14.50 per ton, delivered. This is about $2 less charged by the big dealers. The supply totals 6,000 tons and it comes from West Virginia.

FOIL PONZI JUROR'S SUICIDE

Secrets of Room Bared by the Jurymen in Reply to Allen's Criticism

How a member of the Ponzi jury, driven almost to distraction by the hours of confinement while the jury tried to reach a decision, leaped to a window sill and threatened to commit suicide by jumping to the pavement below, was told to the Boston American for the first time by another member of the jury.

And while the deliberations were being conducted behind locked doors a second jurymen was writhing in agony from a broken bone in his jaw, a third was recovering from an attack of acute indigestion, and a fourth was laboring under a terrible mental strain caused by the death of his father.

These, according to William D. Bonney, of No. 734 East Sixth street, South Boston, were some of the "extenuating circumstances" that forced the jury to act quickly in reaching a decision.

FOIL WOULD-BE SUICIDE.

"Had there been much more delay we would have had at least one dead man on the jury," declared Mr. Bonney, while defending the Ponzi jury from the attacks of Attorney-General Allen.

"I am sure that if Mr. Allen knew of these occurrences that he would not have been so hasty in his public utterances. Take the case of the man who tried to commit suicide. He was already on the window sill when Mr. Imbeschied, the foreman, and others, seized him and pulled him back."

The foreman of the jury, Philip Imbeschied, was among the first to take exceptions to the Attorney-General's denunciation of the Ponzi decision.

CALL VERDICT "FAIR"

"Mr. Allen went altogether too far when he hit at the Ponzi jury. I will give a complete statement shortly which will clearly explain the attitude of the jury."

Daniel F. McBride of No. 432 Bennington street, East Boston, one of the jury, said:

"I am surprised that Mr. Allen would say such things as he did without a full investigation of the matter. We rendered what we considered a fair verdict and that is about all that any men can do."

Harry W. Prout of No. 300 Faneuil street, Brighton, said:

"I want to forget the whole matter, but I will say that the Attorney-General was unjust to this jury in his statements."

BOYS' CLUB IN 12 AUTO THEFTS

Steal Valuable Machines to Give Girls Long Joy Rides

Springfield, Dec. 4.—Blase high school youths here have an exclusive club, formed for the purpose of stealing automobiles to take their flapper friends joy riding.

And these rides, if one may accept the word of some of the members in good standing, are truly joy journeys.

Information as to the existence of this society came to the police from the trembling lips of Gordon K. Dodge, eighteen years old, of No. 96 Garfield street, and David S. Cummings, sixteen, of No. 93 Orange street.

These two boys and Eric W. Helmen, sixteen, of No. 15 Washington street, Dean Shackley, fifteen, of No. 15 Riverview street, and Daniel Alexander, seventeen, of No. 51 Grand street, are under arrest on charges of stealing twelve automobiles.

The bravado of the first and second youngsters faded fast when unsympathetic Palmer police chucked them behind the bars and kept them there until morning, after having yanked them out of a stolen car.

Then a lengthy examination led to complete confession and the implication of the other three boys.

Questioning disclosed that the students, posing as young millionaires, would make long trips of fifty to seventy-five miles, usually accompanied by girls, some of whom were "in the know." Returning, they would always abandon the machines. All the automobiles they took were of expensive make.

3 German Girls Cross Ocean to Wed 3 Soldiers

Portland, Me., Dec. 4.—Three German girls arrived on the British steamer Cassandra today to meet their future husbands.

Legal arrangements for the wedding were completed before the arrival of the ship, and the triple ceremony was performed aboard the ship in the presence of the crew, friends and newspaper men by Rev. George C. Demott of St. Shephen's Episcopal Church.

The couples were Kathe Hudel and Jess Ellis, Bertha Hermann and Joseph Hymann, Christie Nens and William S. Curry.

The men are all stationed at the local forts and met the girls while they were in the army of occupation.

AL JOLSON'S EX-WIFE HAS NEW HUSBAND

San Francisco, Dec. 4.—Mrs. Henrietta Jolson, former wife of Al Jolson, musical comedy star, is a bride again. She has been married to Jack Silvey, manager of the campaign bureau of the California Development Association. Mrs. Jolson divorced her actor husband about two years ago. At the time she complained that he had found more pleasure in the company of other women and had enjoyed too much of the bright lights life for domestic happiness. Jolson was married in August of this year to Miss Alma Osborne, known on the stage as Ethel Delmar.

MAN WOUNDED IN SO. END SHOOTING

Sound of a shot brought a crowd to No. 38 Village street, South End, today. In the hallway were three men. One, Vincent Pena, Portugese, thirty-eight years, of No. 13 Savory street, South End, had been shot through the right leg. He was sent to City Hospital.

The two other men were held on charges of intoxication. As near as the police could learn the three men were calling on a friend. In the hallway a discussion arose and the shooting followed.

NEGRO IS CONVICTED BY BOARD

Found by Another Officer in Doorway With White Girl

Patrolman Frederick E. Miner, colored, of Roxbury Crossing station was dismissed from the police force by Commissioner Wilson today for conduct unbecoming an officer.

Miner was convicted by a police trial board composed of Captains James F. Hickey, John J. Rooney and Robert E. Grant after testimony had been offered to the effect he had been found in a doorway with Helen K. Lane, a white girl, early on the morning of November 12.

His attorney, Charles Driscoll, said he believed "Miner would file an appeal for a public hearing before the commissioner." This must be done within three days.

Patrolman Anthony Tobin was attracted by sounds of scuffling to the doorway of Lewis School, Paulding street, Roxbury. He found Miner with a white girl and his uniform coat had been removed.

Tobin arrested both and took them to Dudley street station, where the girl was booked on an intoxication charge. Miner was immediately suspended from duty.

The girl testified that she had been on her way home from a party with several companions when ac-

POTTER CALLED IN GRAFT PROBE

Elmer C. Potter, Federal prohibition director, today appeared before the Boston Finance Commission to testify at the hearing on alleged irregularities in the city's purchase of the Baldwin place property of the Congregation Beth Israel. Why were you summonsed?" Mr. Potter was asked. "Merely because the commission desires to obtain evidence from the criminal records of this office," came the reply. "Who is involved, Mr. Potter?" "I cannot give that information in advance." The commission adjourned until 10 o'clock tomorrow morning without calling a single witness.

been delayed for some time, while responding to the alarm, by a train on College Avenue crossing.

Roy Shorey, freshman, of Vassalboro, Me., leaped to safety from a second-story window.

Treworgy was asleep in his fifth-floor room. Frye and Andrews were in second-floor rooms.

Treworgy was a football letter man this year and a member of the track squad for three years. He served as associate editor of the College Annual last year.

Andrews was prominent in work of the Colby Christian Association, a member of the editorial board of the College Annual last year and a high ranking student. Frye, a freshman, was popular on the campus and a good student.

ROUSED STUDENTS.

Ralph Bradley of Hanover, Pa., junior, awakened men on the fifth floor of the Delta Upsilon quarters. He required medical aid later as result of his experience.

Barnard Chapman, sophomore, was just leaving a train at the station opposite the campus when he saw flames shooting from the windows of the Lambda Chi Alpha quarters. He sounded an alarm on the college bell, which was followed by a general alarm on the city fire signal.

Ralph S. Robinson, junior, of Manchester, N. H., who was awakened by smoke, roused members of the Lambda Chi Alpha.

When he arrived at the fraternity houses, the members of the Lamda Phi Alpha were fighting the blaze, having fled by way of the fire escapes. They roused members of the adjoining clubhouse, the Delta Upsilon, and assisted many of them from the clubhouse. Upsilon members suffered no loss, but all the belongings of the other fraternity house were destroyed.

BURNED ITSELF OUT.

Dr. Roberts said that the hastily organized group of volunteer fire fighters were unable to cope with the rapidly spreading fire, and that they practically had to let it burn itself out, not, however, without making valiant attempts to determine whether everybody had escaped from the club.

The three victims, contrary to their usual practice, occupied their own rooms in the clubhouse rather than retire in the main sleeping hall with the rest of their brother members. Dr. Roberts said that he was at a loss to account for this. He believes the trio either was overcome by smoke during their sleep or tried to escape from their rooms, but lacked sufficient strength.

Although faulty wiring and a defective flue were advanced as causes of the fire, Dr. Roberts said that his investigation failed to show what the cause was.

Andrew and Treworgy were seniors and Frye a freshman.

First reports of the fire were to the effect that several students were injured and badly burned while fleeing the burning fraternity houses. Dr. Roberts denied this, declaring the men fled from the buildings in an orderly manner.

After identification at the undertaking rooms the bodies were removed to the college chapel, where funeral exercises were held. The entire student body of nearly 500 attended the exercises.

Today the town of Waterville is stunned by the fire particularly because of the rapidity with which it happened. The three students who lost their lives were popular in the village, well liked by their fellow students and favorities of the teaching staff.

Frye came to the college in September. He was a model student and took a keen interest in his studies. He had made his home for years at Revere, Mass.

Following the funeral services at the college, a delegation of Lamda Phi Alpha members were to accompany the bodies to their homes.

Young Frye was president of his class at Revere High School when he graduated in 1920. He also played on the football team and was very popular among his schoolmates. He entered Colby a year ago this Fall and was working his way through.

30 Girls Flee Fire at Wellesley

Thirty frightened girls fled today from South House, Dana Hall School, when clouds of smoke belched through hallways.

Smoke and flames leaping from the roof of the dormitory attracted the attention of all 500 students as well as many of the Wellesley College girls who filled the yard.

Police officers were forced to restrain the girls and keep them back so that the firemen could fight the fire, which was of unknown origin, without interference.

The blaze started in a room on the top floor of the dormitory and burned through the roof. While the loss to the building is not heavy, a number of the girls lost considerable from water damage.

Big Liquor Still Found in Lexington Fire Ruins

A moonshine layout was disclosed today when fire destroyed a barn on Concord avenue, Lexington, burned to death two horses, ruined two farm wagons and disabled nine telephone trunk lines.

Michael Pointedose, a farm hand, was burned about the hands while trying to rescue the horses. The barn was owned by the Ruffo brothers but rented, they told the police, by two Chelsea men.

Chief of Police Patrick J. Maguire has notified the United States prohibition authorities of the find. Telephone service between Boston and Gardner, Fitchburg, Ayer, Concord and Athol was interrupted by the fire. The Lexington department called aid from Waltham. Twenty cows were saved. Twenty-five hens were roasted to death.

Boy Loses Life in Cranston, R. I., Blaze

Cranston, R. I., Dec. 4.—Ten-year-old Pietro Gaglione, Jr., was burned to death early today by fire which destroyed the two-family house at No. 89 Rhode Island avenue. Firemen and police saved eleven others in this house and Sarkis Jeloilian, a bed-ridden cripple, in a cottage next door, which was damaged by flames.

The only scaling ladder the firemen had was too short to reach top windows. The new pumping engine was out of commission and one arrived too late from Pawtuxet.

Detroit, Dec. 4.—Further expansion of the Municipal Street Railway System should be the policy of Senator-Designate Couzens' successor as Mayor of Detroit, in the opinion of Henry Ford. This, the motor manufacturer declared, would treble the street railways business.

Governor of Ireland

TIMOTHY HEALY

HEALY CERTAIN TO TAKE IRISH LEADERSHIP

London, Dec. 4 (By the Associated Press).—The appointment of Timothy Healy as the first Governor-General of the Irish Free State is now regarded as a certainty. It is understood that the post was offered to him some time ago and that its final allotment to the veteran champion of Irish autonomy depended upon his acceptance.

That acceptance, according to several of the best informed correspondents in Dublin, has now been given, and the consensus of opinion today was that the announcement: "The King has been pleased to appoint," will immediately follow the declaration of His Majesty's assent to the Irish bill, which will pass its third and final reading in the House of Lords tonight.

The appointment of Healy is regarded sympathetically here. "Tim's" sharp tongue, with which in the past he has sometimes goaded his opponents in the House of Commons, has been forgotten by the present generation, and, although it was recalled today by parliamentary writers, these memories were brought up without bitterness, and stress was laid rather upon Mr. Healy's unquestioned cleverness and thirty-eight years of experience in parliamentary life as fitting him for the new post.

Troops Balk Threats to Seize Dail Members

(By International News Service)

Dublin, Dec. 4.—Threats of republic irregulars to plunge Dublin into disorder over the week-end and to kidnap certain members of the Dail Eireann under cover of violence, was frustrated and the city continued calm today.

The city and suburbs are still filled with Free State troops and they will be kept on guard until after Wednesday when the Free State becomes an official actuality through King George's approval of the Irish Constitution Act.

Members of the Dail, against whom Republican threats were directed, have taken refuge in government buildings where they will remain temporarily. These buildings are flanked with barbed-wire entanglements and are filled with troops. Machine guns have been mounted at strategic street corners.

Public feeling is growing that the back of the Republican Irregular movement has at last been broken.

Round up of Irregulars continues throughout the entire country. While no official word has been given out regarding Eamon De Valera, it is believed that his seizure is imminent unless he is allowed to flee the country.

SIX RESCUED FROM FIRE IN EAST BOSTON

Miss Mary Cahill made heroic rescue of her two young nephews and firemen helped out Mr. and Mrs. John Crawford and two children at a fire in the three-story wooden block at No. 79 Brooks street, East Boston, today.

The fire started in a closet in the back part of John De Stefano's barber shop on the ground floor. Flames ate through the sheathing to the back stairway and climbed up the stairway woodwork.

This was at 7.30 o'clock. Miss Cahill lives on the top floor with her brother-in-law, Martin Sullivan, and his two boys, John, ten, and Albert, nine. Sullivan had gone to work.

SAVES HER NEPHEWS.

Miss Cahill was up and dressed, the boys were in bed. Miss Cahill opened the back hall door, saw smoke and the glare of flame, slammed the door shut, ran back into the boys' bedroom and roused the two lads. She wrapped an overcoat around both boys and another coat around herself. Then, getting both boys into her arms somehow, she opened the back door and managed to get down stairs, through the fire and smoke, to the outside air and safety. None of the three was harmed beyond taking in a little smoke.

RESCUED BY FIRMEN.

Firemen of Engine 5 and Chemical 7, who arrived just then, raised a ladder at the back and shot chemical streams on the stairway flames. At the same time other firemen assisted the Crawford parents and their boys, Robert, two and John, four, to get out.

Damage was estimated at $200. The building is owned by Patrick Lang. Cause of the fire was not known.

case on its merits, adverse to the contention of the City of Boston, which challenged the law of 1918, under which the State acted, as unconstitutional.

On the question of the constitutionality of the law, the court stated:

"All we now decide is that even if the City of Boston may invoke the contract clause of the Federal Constitution to protect its rights under the lease as against infringing legislation by the Commonewalth, the act of 1918 does not infringe."

The city contended that the State statute under which the railway was taken over by the State for ten years was unconstitutional, in that it impaired the city's contract with the railway company previously made, under which the railway used subways owned by the city.

It was further asserted by the city that, while a deficit of nearly $4,000,000 was shown in operating revenues during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1919, there had been charged in the cost of service approximately $2,000,000 for depreciation and $2,300,000 for maintenance and repairs, showing that "the sums charged . . . were in large part to make up for the neglect of the past."

The Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts in deciding the case held that no constitutional rights of the city were infringed, and that the rehabilitation of the railway was one of the inducements held out to the company to accept the act.

Yankee Ship Brings First Shipment of Turkish Tobacco

Washington Dec. 4.—The United States Shipping Board today made it definitely certain that a few million "Turkish" cigarettes will be genuine.

It seems that even in his reign of discord the Turk finds time to engage in occupations other than massacreing, for when the steamer Manhattan Island docked at Constantinople on September 28 last 67,390 pounds of Turkish tobacco were loaded on and arrived at New York November 15.

The government's great interest in the case is that the customs office has just collected a tariff of $2,000,000 on the cargo, first of the kind transported in an American bottom.

LUSITANIA HAD NO GUNS OR TROOPS

New York, Dec. 4.—After years of speculation and controversy as to its contents, the official report of the makeup of the cargo of the Lusitania on her last voyage from New York was made public here by Dudley Field Malone, collector of the port. When the Cunarder sailed on May 1, 1915, and six days later was sunk by a German submarine off Kinsale Head, Ire., with the loss of more than 1,000 lives, including over 100 Americans.

The report sets forth, according to the New York World:

That the Lusitania carried neither masked nor unmasked guns.

That she carried neither Canadian troops nor troops of any other nationality.

That she carried no explosives.

That she did carry 5,400 cases of ammunition, but that this was specifically permissible under ruling of the Department of Commerce in force since 1911.

Publishers' Good News
Two French Experiments
One Forward Step
You Owe $226

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1922, Star Co.

PUBLISHERS THAT paid seven cents and more for white paper recently will read this with interest.

The Prime Minister of Newfoundland announces that the output of paper will be trebled in that country. Two hundred and fifty thousand more horsepower will be harnessed and put to work on paper machines.

That is welcome insurance against another squeezing operation such as put many of the weaker publishers out of business not long ago.

INTERESTING FLYING machine news. One difficulty is to find your way at night in the fog, or at sea, or over deserts. The French, to establish machine routes of the Sahara Desert, will bury a "loth cable" under the sands straight across the route. The man in a flying machine is able by an electrical device to follow the cable. At intervals along the cable line through the ocean of sand, the flying machine will find supplies. Would a cable stretched across this continent enable fliers at night or in the fog to keep a straight course, with an instrument to warn them of deviation? Has the postoffice tried the "loth cable?"

THE FRENCH with the cooperation of their intelligent government are making another most interesting automobile experiment, sending five machines of the "caterpillar" type 2,000 miles across the Sahara. The "caterpillar" crawls along the ground with a grip such as no other machine possesses, and is the only machine that can finally solve the pulling problem. The difficulty now is the wear on "caterpillar" mechanism by sand and gravel, quickly wearing out the crawling apparatus.

THE ORDINARY tractor would require wheels 125 feet high to give as much grip as can be obtained from a "caterpillar," and a wheel of that height would dig a hole in the ground and be worthless.

Ford made a few "baby caterpillars" during the war. He has neglected opportunity by not going further with that experiment.

THE GOVERNMENT printer will pay women the same as men for the same work. There has been unjust discrimination, he says. That is a belated step toward civilization.

THE DEBT of this country is now exactly $22,624,786,459. Almost twenty-three thousand million dollars. It is a large sum, worthy earnest thought by those that would gayly increase it to finance Europe and more European fights.

The amount is $226 for every man, woman and child in the country. Not all they are worth, but enough. The comfort is in other figures. This nation would be cheap at a thousand billions, so our debt is a little over 2 per cent. of our total wealth, as though a man with $1,000 owed $22.60. The result is the country is not able to collect taxes from those who have the money, so taxes the little people that haven't it. President Harding has reduced the debt by $750,000 in the last year.

PRINCE ANDREW of Greece has been sent into exile. He is a brother of former King

STOLE $50 COAT IN NEW YORK STORE

Miss McGovern, Vainly Seeking Movie Job, "Couldn't Resist" Temptation

New York, Dec. 4.—Margaret McGovern, Boston girl of refinement and beauty, who invaded New York to satisfy her ambitions for the staage, was sentenced to the Bedford Reformatory today for theft of a coat from a Fifth Avenue department store by justices in general sessions.

A charge of violating the Sullivan firearms law was not pressed, when the girl explained an unloaded pistol she had in her possession had been given her to mind by a motion picture man who was to secure her a position.

Miss McGovern is twenty years old. Her stage name was Peggy O'Grady. Leaving a secretarial position in Boston, when friends encouraged her over the possibilities of her voice and beauty, she said she came to New York two months ago and procured work with a musical revue in vaudeville.

Lack of experience caused her dismissal after three weeks' work. From then until her arrest it was the old story of hounding theatrical and moving picture employment offices for a job that never materialized. She lived at No. 620 West 135th street and it was at the door of the apartment house late one night that a policeman happened along as she stood talking with a man she had met that day in a moving picture studio.

"Owing to the lateness of the hour," she said, "he was afraid the policeman might search him so he gave me the pistol and asked me to mind it."

It was next day as she was hurrying to keep a downtown appointment with the man, she told the court, that she happened into the department store and stole a $50 coat.

"I couldn't resist it," she said. Store detectives arrested her.

CLEMENCEAU SURE U. S. IS WITH FRANCE

Baltimore, Dec. 4. (By the Associated Press).—Georges Clemenceau, hailed by Judge Henry Stockbridge, vice-president of the Maryland Historical Society, as "the most memorable figure this century has produced," declared, in a brief talk here today that he was going to take this message back to France:

"Don't fear. America is in the same place. The gratitude she has to us is on such a solid foundation that it cannot be moved forever."

GIVES FUNERAL FEAST AND THEN PASSES ON

Newark, N. J., Dec. 4.—Six weeks ago Percy Evans, wounded World War veteran, invited a score of his wartime and boyhood friends to dine with him.

"This," he told them, "is my last fling. I'm slowly slipping underneath the daisies. Eat all you want. Sing a whole lot and fight, if you wish, but don't wreck the place."

He died in his wheel-chair today.

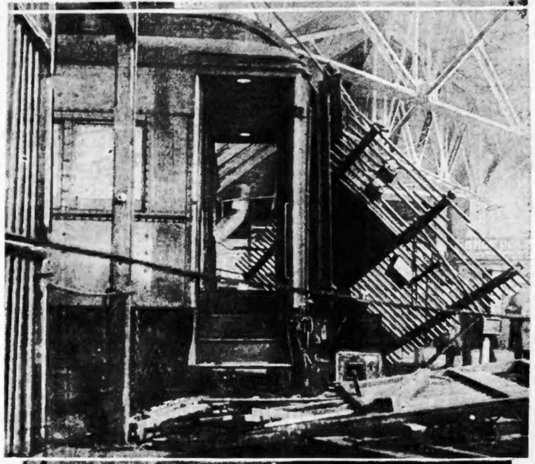
Scene of Accident at South Station

Damaged Gate Through Which Car Was Jammed by New York Flier When It Arrived



HOW COACH WAS JAMMED THROUGH GATES.

Photo shows damage done when Albany express crashed into string of empties in the terminal today. The last car in the string of empties was pushed through the train gates and several feet out on the concourse.

SIX INJURED IN CRASH AT SO. STATION

Six Pullman passengers were injured, one seriously, when the night express from Albany, arriving at the South Station today, crashed into a string of empty coaches standing on Track 1.

Among those injured was Mrs. Robert O. Harris, wife of United States Attorney Robert O. Harris. Mrs. Harris was standing in front of a mirror in the drawing room occupied by her and Mr. Harris when the collision occurred. She was was thrown against the mirror, breaking her glasses, and received cuts about the cheeks and forehead.

Mr. Harris was thrown into the berth but was uninjured. Mrs. Harris was able to proceed to her home in Brockton.

John H. Cavanaugh, aged forty-two, of No. 132 West Ninth street, Erie, Pa., was knocked unconscious when thrown to the floor in the smoking compartment of one of the Pullmans. He was removed to the City Hospital in an embulance.

The Pullman passenger hurt is John H. Cavanaugh, aged forty-two, of No. 132 West Ninth street, Erie, Pa.

The crash was caused by failure of air-brakes to hold when the sleeping cars on the Albany express were being backed into the trainshed. The rear end of the first sleeping car hit the string of standing cars so forcibly that the first coach in the string was pushed through the bumper and fifteen feet through the head-gate into the concourse.

The crash of the collision and the successive crashes as the first coach of the empty cars was jammed through the bumper and head-gate startled commuters of the early-hour rush. The concourse and trainshed floor about the head of Track No. 1 were littered with splintered wood from the broken head-gate.

Boy Is Kept Alive by Artificial Respiration

New York, Dec. 4 (By International News Service).—Artificial respiration applied by a squad of hospital internes and volunteers continues to keep Simon Schlum, sixteen years old, a schoolboy, alive after a four months' confinement in a hospital here as a result of a broken neck and complete paralysis received from a dive into shallow water at Coney Island last Summer.

Thirty volunteers from a district Y. M. C. A. have been working in four shifts ever since an operation for spine fusion was performed last Friday. By their efforts the boy is still alive.

Dr. Hibbs, surgeon, who performed the operation, predicts that Simon will live.

CONGRESS BEGINS NEW SESSION

Washington, Dec. 4.—Congress closed its two weeks' extra session and started its regular session today, with an intervening period of only ten minutes.

By resolution the end of the special session, which began November 20, was closed at 11:50 o'clock and the new and final session began at the statutory hour of noon.

The new session runs until March 3. The principal business of the new session today was receipt of the annual budget.

Tomorrow President Harding is expected to deliver his message outlining the administration's program.

NEW YORK JURY TO PROBE KLAN

New York, Dec. 4.—Judge Mancuso, in General Sessions Court, today instructed the Grand Jury to inquire into the activities of the Ku Klux Klan in New York City and to bring indictments, if violations of the penal code are found.

"I have been informed," said Judge Mancuso to the jurors, "that several meetings were held in this city, where full regalia was used, consisting of a gown and mask. It is your duty to make an investigation with a view to ascertaining whether any of the acts committed violate the statutes of this State."

WIDOW CAUGHT IN RAID TRIES TO END LIFE

Ida Stanbridge, of No. 1189 Commonwealth avenue, Brighton, said to be a widow with an income, was in Brighton court today with Thomas Marshall, whose address is unknown.

Vice Officers Phillips and La Rochelle of the Brighton Station, who made the arrests, said the Stanbridge woman tried to take poison in her bathroom while dressing to accompany the officers.

Judge Connelly fined Marshall $10 and continued the case of Mrs. Stanbridge until January 2, when he said he would determine whether or not she had left the district. Police officers said they had received several complaints that young girls had been seen entering the apartment.

RUSSIANS BACK TURK DEMANDS

Dardanelles Bombshell Upsets Peace Conference at Lausanne

Lausanne, Dec. 4 (By International News Service).—Making common cause of their demands, the Russians and Turks threw a bombshell into the Near East peace conference today when they formally asked that the Turkish Straits be closed to all warships except Turkish and that the Dardanelles be fortified by the Turks as they were before the Great War.

The demand was voiced by George Tchitcherin, head of the Russian Soviet delegation.

Ismet Pasha, leader of the Turkish envoys, followed saying that "Russia's declaration was entirely satisfactory to the Turks."

CAUSES CONSTERNATION.

The conference was thrown into consternation, for there had been evidence that the Turks and Russians were drifting apart and would not execute their threat to form a bloc against the allies.

Lord Curzon, head of the British envoys, left the meeting without speaking. By pooling their demands, the Turks and Russians threaten to precipitate a deadlock of the straits question immediately.

Members of the British delegation in conversation with International News Service charged that "Tchitcherin did not wish a solution of the Turkish straits, but was only here to make trouble."

ALLIED ENVOYS CONFER.

A meeting of Lord Curzon, Marquis Garroni, of Italy; and M. Barrere of France, was summoned for this afternoon when it was expected, the fate of the conference would be decided.

"In view of the action of Russia and Turkey there does not seem to be any use of going ahead," remarked Lord Curzon.

MISS NORMA GORDON.
Whose romance with Arthur Balfour was revealed last week and who was acquitted today of a charge of threatening him.

GIRL IN BROKEN ROMANCE FREED

Norma Gordon, whose shattered romance with Arthur Balfour, married, of No. 24 Crescent Circle, Brighton, was revealed in her arrest Friday for smashing windows in the home of her ex-suitor, was in Brighton Court again today.

Miss Gordon's latest appearance in court resulted from a complaint made by Balfour that Miss Gordon had threatened him in a telephone message early Saturday.

She was found by Special Officer Walter Brown and came to court willingly. Balfour failed to appear and neither Balfour nor his wife could be found at the Crescent Circle home.

"I was in bed at the time Mr. Balfour says he received that telephone message," said Miss Gordon. "If he said I threatened him he lied." Miss Gordon was told there was no charge against her but was cautioned to let the Balfours alone.

Mrs. Gron Asked for Royal Divorce

Society Folk From Many Cities Attend Trial in Portland

Portland, Me., Dec. 4.—With artistocratic composure, Mrs. Madeleine M. Gron told on the witness stand today in Superior District Court, of her dealings with King Christian of Denmark in her efforts to secure a divorce from Neils Gron, a Danish subject.

Prominent people from New York, Boston, Portland and Chicago social circles crowded Judge Sanborn's court to listen to the divorce proceedings of the distinguished society matron.

DISPUTE OVER CHILD.

Mrs. Gron (whose name is pronounced to rhyme with "run") testified that her efforts to have the divorce granted directly by King Christian were abandoned because it was impossible for her and her husband to agree as to the custody of their only child, Neils, aged nine.

Several letters dealing with the seventeen points of misconduct with which Gron charges his wife in his contest of the divorce were introduced and rejected until the question of the jurisdiction of the Portland court is decided.

Evidence of cruel and abusive treatment with which Mrs. Gron charges her husband cropped out repeatedly throughout the involved technicalities of the morning discussion. All matters dealing with the main issues of the divorce were set aside by Judge Sanborn until the jurisdiction question is settled.

ARGUMENTS HEARD.

Counsel from Gron contended Mrs. Gron's case cannot be heard in Port-

LEGION HEAD RAPS BOSTON MEETING

Baltimore, Dec. 4.—Alvin M. Owsley, national commander of the American Legion, today called for a united stand of the legion against the release of political prisoners and against recognition of the Russian government in an address to the Montfaucon Post.

"There is," he declared, "a great wave of radicalism abroad which you and I must do everything to check.

"We read of big meetings like the one in Boston, where distinguished gentlemen, including a United States Senator from Idaho, spoke openly for a general amnesty for political prisoners and for a recognition of the Soviet government.

"Who are these political prisoners that these people are seeking to free? The I. W. Dr. Carracriotl says the mother is six feet, four inches tall, and is sixty-two years old. She worked as a laborer in a mine until two hours before the births.

DENIES KU KLUX MADE CHUM QUIT AT HARVARD

Hubert Kenneth Clay, the Harvard sophomore who was warned to leave college by the Ku Klux Klan, is dangerously ill. He has gone on a trip through the South in an attempt to regain his health.

"Clay will return, however, despite any warnings from that mystic order," his roommate declared. "His trip was arranged in the same manner that any other student arranges for his absence from the institution. The authorities knew that he was going away for his health."

The roommate admitted that Mr. Clay had been greatly worried since he received the warning from the Klan which said: "You have been too indiscreet. Remain in Cambridge at your own peril."

Clay had been affiliated with the Klan. On coming to Harvard he broke off all relations with the organization.

"Clay worried himself sick over the whole affair," continued the room mate. "We tried to show him that the messages could not be serious. The disease with which he has been afflicted for some time worked havoc with him when he became worried over the warnings."

MOVIE WORLD NEWS AND GOSSIP

MARION DAVIES, star of the Cosmopolitan production, "When Knighthood Was in Flower," now at the Park Theatre, frankly declares that tackling the role of Princess Mary Tudor gave her the worst case of stage fright she has ever known.

Despite the fact that she has been receiving congratulations from all over the world on her splendid portrayal of the delightful Mary, and that she has justly attained to the dazzling heights of one of the leading stars of the screen because of it, Miss Davies is still as unassuming and modest as she was before she ever donned the robes of royalty.

"I was frightened from the very beginning—from the moment that picture was suggested," she said. "You see, I had made many pictures, and I had done my best in all of them, but why should I have thought that I possessed the ability to rise to that occasion? 'Knighthood' is no mere moving picture. You must know if you have seen it. And Julia Marlowe had played the Princess Mary on the stage. Then, there was our own company with Lyn Harding as the King—experienced, seasoned Shakespearean players, all to make the pace for me! O, I was frightened, and I'm not ashamed of it, either."

"An Ounce of Prevention is worth a Pound of Cure"

ABOVE are two pictures. Which of them would you choose for your home? In one, an intelligent mother is using a few drops of Zonite as her "ounce of prevention". In the other picture, a grave physician is trying to hold death at bay because those few drops of Zonite were not used.

Perhaps the stricken mother in the more tragic picture thought the small play-time hurt too trivial to bother with. What a terrible mistake! What an agony of self-reproach will be hers if the physician cannot furnish the "pound of cure"!

It is a well-known physiological fact that a small cut or scratch—any slight puncture of the skin—is more apt to lead to serious complications than wounds which bleed freely. A strong flow of blood has a tendency to wash away the germs of blood poisoning and other similar infections which try to settle by millions in any abrasion of the skin, no matter how small. The trivial wound lacks this natural protection and invites the entrance of germs.

Neglect May Prove Fatal

Statistics show that precious lives are lost every day through insignificant wounds. A robust man sustains a small injury in the performance of his daily work; a woman, busy in the kitchen, cuts a finger; a child suffers a little play-time hurt. Some of the billions of never-sleeping germs, swarming like unseen dust particles in the air, infect the wound and death may result.

U. S. Public Health Service reports show that the so-called "mild antiseptics" in general use heretofore have no appreciable germ-killing power. Poisonous antiseptics—as was proved in the Allied hospitals during the war—cannot be used with safety on the human body in strong enough solution to kill germs, and are therefore little better.

Has Saved Many Lives

Zonite is a great modern discovery. It is both powerful and healing. It is an improved form of the miraculous antiseptic that saved hundreds of thousands of wounded soldiers from amputation and death. Although non-poisonous, it has more than twice the germ-killing power of pure carbolic acid. It has a hundred times the germ-killing power of most of the popular "mild antiseptics".

Sterilize all cuts and wounds, no matter how trivial, with Zonite. They will then heal safely with astonishing rapidity and without the usual pain and inflammation. Let a few drops of this magic fluid be your ounce of prevention. They may save a precious life. After infection sets in, the pound of cure is frequently in vain.

Facts About Zonite

Zonite is rapidly supplanting weak, foaming or flavored antiseptics heretofore used by the public, because they cannot be relied upon to destroy infection.

Zonite is rapidly replacing such poisons as bichloride of mercury, carbolic acid, iodine, etc., because experience in the war hospitals in France showed conclusively that they are inefficient, undependable or unsafe.

When promptly used on fresh cuts, wounds and abrasions, Zonite affords the best and safest protection known to materia medica against the dangers of infection.

On account of its great germicidal power and non-poisonous character, Zonite can be used as a mouth wash at sufficient strength to destroy the germs which cause pyorrhea and many other diseases.

Used as a nasal spray and douche it will be of incalculable value during epidemics of contagious childhood diseases.

PROF. FISHER ASKS BORAH TO DEBATE

Professor Irving Fisher, chairman of economics at Yale University, has challenged Senator William E. Borah to a debate in Boston on the advisability of the United States entering the League of Nations. Senator Borah, who is violently opposed to the United States entering the league, is willing to debate with the Yale economist, but does not see how he can spare the time before March 4.

Conrad W. Crooker, chairman of the Liberal Republican League, to whom Professor Fisher addressed his telegram challenging Senator Borah, is trying to arrange for a debate on some Sunday afternoon at Boston Opera House.

WORCESTER BREWERS MUST STAND TRIAL

Efforts by counsel for the Worcester Products Company, Worcester brewers, to prevent a hearing on the government's bill to prevent them from further manufacture of beer failed today when Federal Judge Anderson denied a motion to have the bill dismissed. This means the company and its officers must stand trial on charges that they have manufactured 2, 3 and 4 per cent. beer and have thereby committed a nuisance. Arguments on the government's bill, which seeks to have the company close its brewery, will be heard in a few weeks.

Mrs. Gron Asked for Royal Divorce

land because she has not claimed legal residence in this city.

Frank A. Morey, ex-mayor of Lewiston and counsel for Gron, waived his right to cross-examine Mrs. Gron, and Thomas S. Ormiston, famous trustee and treasurer of the New York law school, conducted the examination.

Under his questioning a complicated geographical outline of Mrs. Gron's career from the time of her first marriage to Dr. Carl Stone of Chicago to the time of her coming to Portland with her small son, was sketched.

HUMOROUS ASIDES.

Mrs. Gron is an exceedingly attractive brunette, of slender build. She exhibited the greatest poise on the stand, answering the grilling questions put to her in a serene, modulated voice, with occasional smiles and humorous asides.

She was modishly dressed in black, with a slender string of fine pearls clasped about her throat. She wore a becoming black veil, snugly fastened over her dark marcelled hair.

Accompanying her in court were her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Harden W. Masters of Springfield, Ill. Her brother, Edgar Lee Masters, the famous "Spoon River" poet, has not appeared in court, but may be called before the trial is over.

Rev. John H. Metcalf, minister of the First Parish Church, Portland's most fashionable congregation, has been with Mrs. Gron ever since the opening of the trial.

Mrs. John Vernon Bouvier, Jr., Mrs. Gron's youngest daughter, was also in court, together with Mrs. Adam Phillips Leighton, Portland's social dictator, and life-long friend of Mrs. Gron.

Temple Emmet, Jr., a business associate of Gron's, and nephew of Lieutenant-Governor Louis Chandler of New York, was the sole companion of Neils Gron.

CHARGES INTOXICATION.

Mrs. Gron testified that shortly after her marriage with Gron she discovered that because of his habitual intoxication she did not care to live with him. As soon as she could travel after the birth of her son, she testified, she left Denmark for America, settling in Chicago. Shortly afterwards Gron returned to Denmark for the purpose of running in a political campaign.

Mrs. Gron strenuously objected to the use of the word "political" in the question, declaring that in Denmark there is no such thing as a political campaign in the American understanding of the word.

"Any man, no matter what his qualifications may be, may put himself up for any office he pleases and go stumping around at the last minute and vote for himself; that is what my husband did," she said, indignantly, before her remark could be ruled out.

DODGED HIM AT SEA.

Mrs. Gron declared that she spent a great deal of her time sailing between America and Europe, for the express purpose of avoiding her husband.

Her divorce proceedings, filed in Chicago in 1919, were abandoned, she declared, because that was the only means she had of securing the release of her small son who had been kidnaped by his father. She declared that Gron took the boy to Denmark and kept him, without letting her know what had become of the child.

Mrs. Gron told of written agreement between herself and her husband that if she would return to him for the sake of the child he would try to become self-supporting, would give up drinking and "act as courteous and considerate as any mere stranger would to myself and my children."

DE VALERA MEN COLLECT 11 THOUSAND

One of the most tumultuous meetings ever held in Boston was held at Symphony Hall when, to cries of "To Hell with King George" and "Down with England," 5,000 Irish Republican sympathizers met to welcome Eamon De Valera's two personal representatives to this country.

Eleven thousand dollars was collected.

These two envoys, J. J. O'Kelley and Joseph O'Doherty, made stirring pleas for their cause and asserted that "we will never stop fighting until Ireland is a Republic."

This statement drew thunderous applause, while every mention of King George, England, or Michael Collins was greeted with hoots, catcalls and jeers.

Attorney John J. Hughes promised the delegates that their sympathizers here would supply them with arms, ammunition and money until their cause was won.

Back Bay Woman Gets Divorce From Mate Who Threw Dishes

Mrs. Olga Akerlind of No. 6 Batavia street told Justice Walter P. Hall today that her husband, Carl, got his exercise throwing dishes at her after dinner. The only Christmas present he ever gave her, she said, was a punch. Carl then left the house and has not returned.

Others who received divorces were: Mrs. Kate Bronsky, Mrs. Eva Murray of No. 20 Grove street, Mrs. Irene Fountain of No. 106 Beacon street, Mrs. Mathilde Linke and Ferdinando Margi.

ARREST SUSPECT ON MURDER CHARGE

Sergeant John McDonald of East Dedham street station, the man with "the camera mind," was in Shawmut avenue with Patrolman Gaffey this noon. Emmanuel Smith slouched out of Compton street.

"Ah, there's a gink wanted in Waterbury for murder," he whispered to Gaffey. Emmanuel is now at Station 5 waiting the arrival of Waterbury, Ct., police, who will see if he is the man that they say shot to death his landlady, Mrs. Isen Norwood.

BILL WOULD OUST 'REFORM LOBBY'

A bill admittedly aimed at ousting paid reform lobbyists from the State Legislature has been introduced by Representative C. E. Kelly of Dorchester.

It provides that acceptance or solicitation of contributions for support of any legislative measure likely to infringe on personal liberty shall be deemed a misdemeanor, punishable by a $100 fine or a year's imprisonment.

The passage of the bill, according to Representative Kelly, will rid the Legislature of paid professional reformers.

"We have a small group of reformers known as the Good Government Association," Kelly stated, "who advertise and support candidates they endorse for City Council. Only recently we have read of graft charges brought by the Finance Commission, which is in league with the Good Government Association."

To the man or woman who has not yet discovered the Scientific Rubber Heel

THOUSANDS of people in New England—and among them scores that you know — bought their first pair of Spring-Step Rubber Heels on their repairmen's recommendations.

These same people today would not even think of having any other kind of rubber heels on their shoes.

It might be well worth your while to ask one or two of them why.

* * *

The man who is on his feet a lot will tell you that U. S. Spring-Steps are more comfortable than any heel he ever wore before.

Another, that they are so much better looking.

And if you talk to a man or woman who keeps a record of personal expenses, you will learn that U. S. Spring-Step Rubber Heels have to be renewed much less frequently. They are more serviceable.

* * *

Practically every shoe repairman in New England can give you U. S. Spring-Step Rubber Heels.

They cost you no more.

To be sure of getting them call for them by name when you leave your shoes with him.

The U. S. Spring-Step Rubber Heel is the result of putting the greatest staff of rubber technicians in the country at work on the problem of producing a better heel.

They were given all the time they needed to do it. They were not dead-weighted by any question of "how much will it cost to manufacture."

U. S. Spring-Step is the scientific rubber heel. Yet you pay no more for U. S. Spring-Steps than for ordinary hit-or-miss rubber heels.

WOODHOUSE LAWYER SAYS DORRIT IS AIMING AT PUBLICITY

LOOKS FOR MONEY IN SUIT

He Flays Young Wife in Argument to Jury in $1,000,000 Case

Burlington, Vt., Dec. 4.—Declaring that the million-dollar suit for alienation of affections brought against Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Woodhouse by Mrs. Dorrit S. Woodhouse, their daughter-in-law, was instigated primarily for advertising purposes and to make the Woodhouses pay, Attorney V. A. Bullard resumed his argument in behalf of the defence today.

In opening his plea counsel asserted that the plaintiff in marrying Douglas Woodhouse "did not want a home, but something else."

In all the letters from his wife which have been produced there was not one word of encouragement to Douglas, counsel asserted. "Not a word in her "Cutie Pie" letters was there about a home," he said, adding that the letters instead were so vulgar that they could not be read openly in court.

NO SNUBS, LAWYER SAYS.

Regarding the first meeting between Dorrit and Mrs. L. E. Woodhouse, Mr. Bullard said, the plaintiff had testified that her mother-in-law received her coldly. He had introduced evidence to show that Mrs. Woodhouse received the girl in the garden of the Woodhouse home and said he could see nothing cold about the reception.

There was nothing to substantiate the claim that Mrs. Woodhouse snubbed her, he argued, contending the attitude of Mrs. Woodhouse was just what it should have been.

"Douglas Woodhouse was forced into this marriage and as soon as he got where he could, he ran away from it," said Bullard.

REFERS TO OPERATION.

Referring to the condition in which Dorrit Stevens found herself shortly before her marriage, and to the operation which followed, the layer asked:

"Why didn't she have this child prattling around here and running up and down the aisle? They might have gotten into trouble (referring to Douglas and Dorrit). I admit that it happens all too often. But the evidence tends to show that this woman was without the least spark of motherhood in her breast.

"A woman that will write the letters that she wrote—going onto the carving table—what for? to take away that which God had given her. A child might have shielded all the difficulties in this case and bound her husband to her. Did it require a father and a mother to alienate the affections of Douglas after that?"

"They haven't got a single thing in this case except inference," the attorney declared. "This suit was brought in the first place as an advertisement and in the second place it was brought to compel the defendants to settle, with no idea that it would ever get into court."

Collins Trustees Sue De Valera for $10,000

Dublin, Dec. 4 (By the Associated Press).— Suit for $10,000 has been brought against Eamon De Valera in Chancery Court by Bishop Fogarty, Dr. Richard Hayes and John Collins, brother of the late Michael Collins, as trustees of the national fund, together with President Cosgrave in his capacity as Minister of Finance.

As it is impossible to serve the writ personally on De Valera, the court granted permission to serve him by advertisement.

HEMPEL SCORES AT JENNY LIND RECITAL

Boston's curiosity, whetted for a year, was satisfied when Frieda Hempel appeared at Symphony Hall to give her Jenny Lind recital. Nearly 3000 persons sat and stood for the entire recital. They not only were delighted with all that the program offered, but begged for more. It is scarcely necessary to say that Miss Hempel was as generous as she always is with encores.

So far as can be judged without having a memory of one's own, the illusion of a Jenny Lind setting was admirable. There was the "Welcome Sweet Warbler" banner to greet one's eye on entering. The costumes were charming—not only Miss Hempel's, but also those of Coenraad V. Bos, accompanist, and Louis P. Fritze, flutist.

Miss Hempel's program ran the gauntlet of all the songs that made Jenny Lind famous—or rather that Jenny Lind made famous. For the Echo Song, Miss Hempel banished Mr. Bos from the stage and sat down at the piano to play her own accompaniment.

The encores were interesting—as much so, if not more, than the programmed numbers. The first was "I'd Be a Butterfly," and that was followed by "The Last Rose of Summer," "Dixie," and "The Blue Danube." The best of all the songs was the encore "The Night Winds," which the artist was obliged to repeat.

Mr. Bos played a group of piano numbers and Mr. Fritze also contributed with two flute solos. Both were encored.

T. J. Coolidge, Jr., Sixth on Society List of Bachelors, Says Betty Alden

Charles E. Cotting
Francis Brooks
Dudley L. Pickman, Jr.
Frederic S. Allen
Gordon C. Prince
Thomas Jefferson Coolidge, Jr.

THOMAS JEFFERSON COOLIDGE, JR., eldest son of Mrs. T. Jefferson Coolidge of Beacon street, completes our list of Boston's six most eligible bachelors.

He's a very tall, dark young man, and rather noted for his reserved manner. He was graduated from Harvard with the class of '15, and is a member of the Somerset, Tennis and Racquet, Essex County, Myopia and Exchange clubs. His two brothers are Amory and William Coolidge, both of them Harvard men. The Coolidges, one of New England's oldest and most prominent families, seem to be related to everyone who's some one. Miss "Eleo" Sears, by the way, is one of T. J. Coolidge's many well-known cousins.

Mr. Coolidge, who attended the training camp at Plattsburg, sailed overseas as a captain in the 302d Field Artillery, 76th Division, and took part in the Saint-Mihiel offensive. During the Summer he lives with his mother and brothers at the Coolidges' estate on Coolidge Point, Magnolia, one of the most attractive spots of the North Shore.

There's quite a wealth of family lore hovering about the name of Coolidge. Young Coolidge's grandfather, whose name he bears, was the great-grandson of Thomas Jefferson, third President of the United States. This Thomas Jefferson Coolidge, who passed away only two years ago—he was in his 90th year—was one of Harvard's most generous benefactors, though he gave a good deal to many other institutions during his life time. He founded a free library at Manchester-by-the-Sea, where he had a Summer home for many years. Besides this he was known as one of New England's most prominent business men, and during President Harrison's administration he served as Minister to France.

MRS. JOHN T. J. CLUNIE

The first debutante of the season to become a bride was Miss Suzette Courtney of Bay State road, who is now Mrs. John T. J. Clunie. The wedding was solemnized on Saturday at the Arlington Street Church. (Photo by Bachrach.)

THEY made a very dainty and colorful picture did the maid of honor and bridesmaids who attended Miss Suzette Courtney upon her marriage to John T. J. Clunie on Saturday at the Arlington Street Church.

Being the very first debutante of the season to join the ranks of "Married Maidens," as the Social Register terms them, it was only fitting that Suzette Courtney's wedding should be a pretty one. And it was.

Sally Cabot, the deb daughter of Mrs. Charles M. Cabot, as maid of honor, was gowned in old-fashioned style, her dress of pink taffeta having a long full skirt and tight bodice. She wore a fetching poke bonnet of pink, silk trimmed, with gay plumes of the same color, and carried an old-fashioned bouquet.

Of effectively contrasting colors were the dresses of the ten bridesmaids, the Misses Clara Barnes, Helen Clark, Betty Cole, Mary Foss, Anita Bowditch, Mary Joslin, Harriet Jones, Mary Hall, Mildred Hill and Mabel Holden. Five of the girls wore gowns of lavender satin and chiffon, with girdles of yellow chiffon, the others wearing similar gowns of yellow, the girdles being lavender. All wore hats of lavender with yellow plumes and carried Ophelia roses and lavender sweet peas.

The bride's father, Dr. J. W. Courtney of Bay State road, gave her away, while her brother, Paul Courtney, was the head usher. John H. Hall, Jr., served as best man for the bridegroom, who, by the way, is a San Francisco man. He was graduated from Harvard with the class of 1919 and served overseas with the Twenty-sixth Division. Mr. Clunie and his youthful helpmeet are to make their home at No. 382 Commonwealth avenue.

IN striking contrast was the simplicity which marked the wedding of Miss Sybil Appleton and Oliver Wolcott. However, not all the simplicity in the world could detract from the interest of the ceremonial, which was solemnized at the country home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Randolph M. Appleton, in Ipswich.

The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a gown of white velvet and veil of tulle. There were no attendants. The bridegroom, a Harvard '13 man, is the son of Mrs. Roger Wolcott, with whom he has been making his home in Milton. The announcement of his engagement to Miss Appleton, coming only a fortnight ago, created quite a furore, for Sybil Appleton, with her overseas record of work in the devastated regions of France, was one of the notable girls of her year.

IF you want an easy way of helping all kinds of animals in distress, why not patronize the annual Animal Rescue League bazaar being held at the Hotel Vendome?

All sorts of Christmas gifts may be purchased there, and I hear that there is to be an unusually fine display of toys. As usual, quite a group of fashionables are lending their aid.

Mrs. Marks.

Mrs. Marks was widely known through her winning of the Stratford-on-Avon prize in 1910 for her drama, "The Piper," which was subsequently produced both in England and in America.

She was the author of several other plays and volumes of poems and a frequent contributor to leading magazines.

Mrs. Marks was born in New York and attended Radcliffe from 1894 to 1896. She was instructor in English literature at Wellesley College from 1901 to 1903. In 1906 she married Lionel S. Marks, professor of mechanical engineering at Harvard.

The Choice of the World

Boston, London, Paris, or Pekin—wherever you see well-dressed women—there you will see the sparkle of the diamond. For the diamond is the stone which for centuries has been the one most liked all over the world.

The diamond has a clear beauty that never clashes with any complexion or costume. It may be set alone, in clusters, or with other stones—its brilliance never diminishes.

A Christmas gift of a diamond bar pin, a dinner ring, or a pendant will delight your wife or your wife-to-be. It is the gift for all time, above the whim of fashion or the color of the year.

We have been diamond merchants for one hundred and twenty-two years. We have seen fads in jewelry come and go, but we, like the jewelers of other countries and other days, have never known the time when women did not enjoy the possession of diamonds.

BREAD IN CHRISTMAS BASKETS PRESENTED BY BAKING COMPANY

HUNDREDS OF LETTERS ASK FOOD FOR HUNGRY

Five thousand loaves of crisp, nutty-flavored Bond Bread have been contributed to the Boston American Christmas Basket Fund through the generosity of the officials of the General Baking Company. This is the biggest gift made to the American's Christmas Fund thus far this season. The retail value of this excellent contribution is $600.

WORK TO AID XMAS BASKET FUND

SYLVIA AND BERTHA RUBY

These two girls, of No. 60 Beals street, Brookline, have been active in collecting money to fill the baskets which the Boston American will distribute to the hungry on Christmas. Have you done your part?

Officials of the General Baking Company told the Christmas Fund editor they would be glad to co-operate with him in feeding the unfortunate of Greater Boston at Christmas. They also said that the bread they would donate for the American's Christmas parcels will be full size, freshly baked loaves.

Bond Bread is, without doubt, one of the most healthful foods before the public today. The finest ingredients are used in its manufacture. It never varies, as every ingredient is carefully weighed with precision. Every ounce of flour, lard, milk, yeast and sugar that goes into each batch of bread is measured so that exact results may be obtained. The expert mixers of the company are more careful than the average housewife in this respect.

The formula from which this bread is made was selected from more than 5,000 recipes submitted by New England housewives in a prize contest.

PERSONAL INSPECTION.

The Christmas Fund editor of the American has made a careful inspection of the conditions under which Bond Bread is manufactured. He has visited the large bakery in which the bread is made and knows that everything is conducted in the most sanitary manner possible. Human hands practically never touch the bread from the time the flour arrives until the rich, brown loaves emerge, wrapped and sealed in glazed germproof paper, ready for delivery.

The average housewife would be amazed if she visited the bakery and saw the care in sanitation that is taken by the officials of the company.

At the Charlestown and Roxbury bakeries of the company many carloads of the finest flour are always on hand. At these two plants more than 100,000 loaves of bread are baked daily. This gives an idea of the extensive demand there is for Bond Bread.

The company has left nothing undone to make the bread as good as possible. Officials of the General Baking Company believe it is not possible to make finer bread than Bond Bread. A guarantee, or bond, is given with every loaf. The company is ready to back up every word that is printed on the guarantee. The firm stands back of this bread in every way, believing that it is without an equal. It believes this bread comes nearer to furnishing a complete ration for men, women and children than any other item of diet.

The Christmas Fund Editor is confident that these fine big loaves of Bond Bread will be fully appreciated by the thousands of impoverished men, women and children who will obtain them on Christmas Day.

TEA ALSO DONATED.

Three thousand packages of Salada Tea have been donated to the Christmas Fund through the courtesy of Peter C. Larkin, president of the company. One package of this widely known beverage will be placed in each of the parcels. Mr. Larkin has made a similar contribution to the American's parcels for several years, and, according to the local manager of the firm, the American's Fund is the only one that has received a contribution of this type from the company this season. This excellent beverage will help materially in rounding out the Christmas dinners.

F. M. Archer, president of the Moxie Company, has volunteered to place lollypops in each of the American's parcels. Mr. Archer is also planning to aid the fund in several other ways. He has already made a personal financial contribution.

An entertainment and dancing party in aid of the Fund has been arranged by Miss Kathryn Sloane of No. 178 Lexington street, East Boston. The party will be held in Music Hall, East Boston, on Thursday evening, December 21. Miss Sloane will be aided by the numerous pupils who attend both her dancing schools. Among the children who will be featured in the entertainment are Gladys Olsen, Arline Cummings, Blanche Timmins, Hazel Parkins, Ruth Higgins, Helen Sullivan, Mary Marley, Rita Murphy, Margaret McNeil and Agnes Driscoll.

Others who have aided the fund by loaning automobiles are J. Scott McLearn of No. 160 Allston street, Allston; Nash Motor Company, 460 Commonwealth avenue; Dodge Motor Company, 989 Commonwealth avenue; Franklin Motor Company, 739 Boylston street; Henley, Kimball Company, 652 Beacon street; Reo Motor Company, 29 Brookline avenue; Chandler Motors, 712 Beacon street and Mrs. J. Loots of No. 18 Hancock street, Everett.

Another person who is hustling to make the fund a success is Miss Lillian Harris of Stanwood Terrace, Roxbury, who collected $5.18 at the Magnet Theatre, Dorchester.

Sylvia and Bertha Ruby of No. 60 Beals street, Brookline, are aiding again this year by making collections.

APPEALS POUR IN.

Hundreds of letters appealing for food have already been received. The Christmas Fund editor will do his utmost to take care of every needy case that comes to his attention, but it will be necessary for many people to put their shoulders to the wheel if all who really need food are to be fed this year.

One of the letters that has been received came from a child in Chelsea. It reads as follows: "Please bring us some food. My father is dead and there are seven children in the family. We can't buy any Christmas dinner, so please send us one."

Another letter received from a destitute family reads:

"Will you kindly send us a basket this Christmas? My husband is a World War Veteran and he was wounded and was going to the government school, but they have discontinued him from the payroll and he is out of work. Although I am young I cannot go to work to help because I am an expectant mother. We had a few dollars saved, but on account of my husband being out of work it is flying fast. I can just picture what a dreary Christmas we are going to have, with no one to come and cheer us up, so I am asking, dear editor, if you will kindly send us a basket for Christmas? We will appreciate it very much and will thank you very much."

FAMILY OF SIX.

A boy living in the West End wrote: "We have a family of six. Our father is dead and our mother works, but cannot afford a Christmas dinner for this Christmas. I am sure through your kindness you will send us a basket so we can have a Christmas dinner."

Another family living in the West End, asking for a basket of food for Christmas, wrote: "Will you kindly send me a Christmas basket because I have a sick husband who has been out of work for one year. I have seven children and they won't feel happy without anything to remember Christmas by. I would appreciate a basket very much."

Football fans who attended the Revere Elks-Chelsea Millstreams contest in Everett contributed enough money to buy many dinners for impoverished families. The total collection at the game was $17.21. Among those who assisted in making the collection a success were Ethel Burns, Teresa Donovan, Ethel Hooper, Florence Kelley, Florence Burns, Norah Roche, Albert Brown, Joseph Morrin, John Callich, Albert A. McKenzie and Mrs. Frederic R. Healy.

Many children continue to contribute to the Fund. Ruth and Gertrude Goldfarb of No. 32 Franklin place, Revere, wrote to the Christmas Fund editor as follows: "Enclosed you will find $1.00, which I and my little sister Gertrude saved. Hoping this will make some little girl happy on Christmas. I remain."

Sherman L. Whipple, one of New England's leading lawyers, who annually contributes to the fund, sent $25 and wrote, "I am glad of the opportunity again to contribute to the Boston American Christmas Basket Fund. I enclose herewith my check for $25."

A typographical error was made in listing the contribution of Henry E. Russell. Mr. Russell gave $25 to the Fund instead of $5, as it appeared in previous lists.

ATLANTIC CITY BOARDWALK

Mechanics Building Dec. 1-9 Inclusive

Pageant Draws Huge Crowd

SCENIC DISPLAY EXCITES WONDER

Beach, Bathing Girls, Boardwalk and Shops Make Realistic Picture

With a life-likeness that excites the amazement and admiration of all who have visited the famed New Jersey coast resort, the "Atlantic City Boardwalk" has been reproduced at Mechanics Building.

Until the closing of the doors on Saturday evening will be offered attractions patterned after those which have made Atlantic City famous as the social playground of fashionable America, for the entertainment of Greater Boston residents and the benefit of a number of worthy organizations.

The stretch of rolling blue sea dotted with tiny pleasure craft, the rows and rows of fantastic shop facades, the crowds of leisurely strolling visitors, and the world-famed boardwalk, with the equally famous rolling chairs make the scene as picturesque as Atlantic City itself.

REAL SAND BEACH.

Across one end of the beach are piers extending out into the painted sea, above which painted airships hover in the painted blue sky. And as if to convince the skeptic, there is the stretch of sandy beach—real sand—in which the children, and grown-ups, too, may, if they care to, dig to their heart's content. Beautiful girls, exhibiting the smartest bathing costumes, frequent the beach, as though ready to plunge into the oncoming waves. The girls are real. Only the booming of the breaking surf is needed to make the illusion complete.

The object of the spectacle is to provide funds for the benefit of the Massachusetts League of Women Voters, the New England Hospital for Women and Children, the Disabled Service Men and the Frances E. Willard Settlement, under whose auspices the spectacle has been arranged.

To accomplish this purpose shops have been erected and rented to leading merchants and business firms of Boston, where there will be on sale an incredible variety of things. In addition, all sorts of organizations whose purpose it is to help the deserving poor and others are represented in the shops to catch a share of the Christmas gift trade.

A graphic illustration of the manner in which the Travelers' Aid Society helps young girls, strangers and immigrants who alight at Boston's railway stations and docks is given in a miniature station contained in their shop at Booth No. 54. A second-hand sale is being conducted in this booth, and various articles are on sale from ten cents up. Mrs. Rusesll S. Codman is in charge here.

The New England Hospital, which has entered this exposition with all kinds of of energy, is conducting a delightful Flower Shop in Booth No. 38. This shop, conducted by Mrs. George F. Swain, offers all kinds of flowers, potted plants and bulbs for sale, and is a welcome oasis of green coolness amid the busy rush of the exhibits.

Christmas shoppers are flocking to booth No. 57, where the Syrian Relief Association has a wide variety of gifts for sale. Reedwork baskets, laces and embroideries and special Syrian sweetmeats, packed in boxes which are especially suitable for Christmas givers, make this shop a highly attractive place. It is conducted by Mrs. E. S. Malouf.

Mrs. William T. Glidden and Mrs. J. Sumner Draper as chairmen have made No. 41, the Artistic Novelty Shop, all that the name implies. They are assisted by the following ladies, all of whom are interested in the New England Hospital for Women and Children: Mrs. George R. Alley, Mrs. Robert Baldwin, Mrs. John A. Paine, Mrs. F. Delano Putnam, Mrs. Robert C. Morse, Mrs. Horace S. Frazer, Mrs. L. A. Houghton, Mrs. Benj. E. Brewster, Mrs. Arthur E. Thayer and some fifty others.

The Edison Electric Illuminating Company has an interesting display at booth No. 68. All sorts of electrical appliances, from coffee percolators and patent toasters down to curling-iron heaters and flashlights, are for sale here. This booth, gleaming with the long rows of silver and nickel devices on its shelves, is proving a magnet for the Christmas shoppers.

SPLINTERS FROM THE BOARDWALK

Christmas shoppers will be interested in the booth conducted by the Bigelow, Kennard Company, Inc., Shop, No. 45. One of the finest exhibits of jewelry imaginable is on display there. Diamond watches mounted with navette diamonds and emeralds, earrings with interchangeable drops of jade, amethyst and onyx, and jade pendants are among the features there.

Shop 44 is another of the New England Hospital shops. This particular booth has "Yuletide Treasure" for sale and offers a variety of knicknacks of all kinds to Christmas shoppers. It is in charge of Mrs Grant W. Norwell, assisted by Mrs. Harry H. Kimball and Mrs. David M. Little.

The Disabled Ex-Service Men's Exchange, in "The Hut," offers an interesting variety of goods made by the wounded veterans. Such things as leather goods, basket work of all kinds, straps and many varieties of hand-woven work will be sold here, and the proceeds will go to help the men who made these things—men who became permanently disabled while fighting overseas. This shop is in charge of Mrs. E. M. Beals, who has as her assistants Mrs. J. H. Kean, Mr. P. Hubbard and Mrs. H. King.

Books of all kinds are to be found for sale in booth No. 6, where the Old Corner Bookstore holds forth. Copies of all the best sellers are on the shelves beside technical works, historical books and copies of the classics. Mrs. C. G. Lennihan, Jr. is in charge here.

A morning musicale will be held Wednesday morning at 11:30 in the Boardwalk Theatre, when Dai Buell, Boston's favorite pianist, gives a program of extra fine classical music. Miss Buell has selected an unusual program, and music lovers who attend her performance—which, by the way, is being held for the Francis E. Willard Settlement—are assured of a treat.

That tingling, toe-stirring music you hear when you sit in the Boardwalk Theatre or dance in the big dance pavilion comes from the famous Ives' Band, which is under the direction of D. A. Ives, well known as a navy bandmaster during the war, and since then one of Boston's leading exponents of jazz.

"We Heal All Nations" is the slogan of the dispensary shop of the New England Hospital for Women and Children, located in booth No. 49. Attendants at this shop wear authentic costumes of the various nationalities which have been aided by the hospital. Toys, toilet articles and the like will be on sale here, with a staff of workers under the direction of Mrs. Grant William Nowell.

An unusually attractive line of hand embroidery, yarns and novelties is on display in Booth No. 19—the Needle Craft Shop. This shop provides a number of useful, decorative and at the same time comparatively inexpensive gifts for the Christmas shoppers who throng the exposition. It is in charge of Mrs. M. T. Crooker.

Candies, preserves, cakes and pastries of all kinds are to be found in shop No. 46, the Delicatessen Shop, conducted by the New England Hospital for Women and Children. A number of home-made Christmas products, such as guava jelly, fig jam, preserved figs and so on, are on sale here besides typical New England delicacies, which include pies, cakes, cookies, biscuits and breads.

Booth No. 39 goes under the expressive title of "Feminine Fripperies." As the name indicates, this shop retails lingeries of all kinds. Filmy, creamy laces, softly-woven underthings, dainty muslins and silks, gleaming hosiery of a kind that makes its fair purchaser yearn for the return of the short-skirt styles. The New England Hospital for Women and Children, which is running this booth, bids fair to profit hugely by this particular undertaking. Mrs. Benjamin P. Richardson is chairman at this shop.

To describe the Atlantic City Boardwalk show without mentioning the Boardwalk Theatre would be like trying to relate Shakespeare's "Hamlet" without touching on the part played by the w. k. melancholy Dane.

This theatre, a great tribute to the energy and activity of Virginia Tanner, who has been in charge of all arrangements, presents two shows daily: an afternoon performance at 2:30, and one in the evening at half past eight.

Under the able guidance of Raymond Sovey, art director, the theatre has passed definitely from the usual "amateur" affair, generally to be found at a charitable enterprise of this kind, and has become a playhouse that ranks favorably with any commercial house in the city.

There is a daily change of bill. Each performance is a mixture of amateur and professional work in just the right proportions. And the amateur work, be it known, has been drilled and prepared until it need not fear to appear beside the acts put on by the "pros".

The untiring enterprise and ingenuity of Miss Tanner, coupled with the artistic judgment of Mr. Sovey, has made the Boardwalk Theatre a prize feature of the exposition. Interest in the theatre, for the average patron, is enhanced by the fact that Miss Tanner has secured sixty debutantes, fresh from the more flaky sections of Boston's upper crust, to act as ushers.

SOCIETY MATRONS TEND SHOPS FOR CHARITY

PROMINENT AT SHOW.

Mrs. Clarence R. Edwards (at left), is one of the prominent workers in charge of "The Hut" and the booth for disabled soldiers. Mrs. Arthur G. Rotch (in oval), president of the Massachusetts League of Women Voters, in charge of the "Midway."

At the right is Mrs. J. Sumner Draper, chairman of the New England Hospital Shop. Mrs. Larz Anderson (in circle), another social leader, who is especially interested in "The Hut."

THE WINCHESTER SHOP on the pier has been the centre of attraction, inasmuch as it has had the assistance of fifteen charming young ladies from the various girls' schools and colleges in Boston, who have volunteered their services as models, that the Atlantic City Boardwalk would be a success. Strolling about the Boardwalk you will see the skating girl, the bathing girl, a debutante outfitted for her morning ride and the athletic girl in her sport clothes. The now popular "Knicker Suit" is worn by several portraying the golfing girl and the out-of-door girl. All are charming and show to an advantage the complete line of the Winchester (Read) Stores.

APRONS, APRONS, APRONS. Shop No. 12 displays aprons of all kinds, colors and descriptions. This shop, under the auspices of the New England Hospital for Women and Children, is directed by a most hard-working committee, headed by Mrs. William Otis Crosby.

THE YOUNG WOMEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION of Boston booth, No. 50, is attractive in its simplicity, and under the well directed chairmanship of Mrs. Marion L. Higgins, the work of the Y. W. C. A. of Boston is being outlined to all those interested in their work. At No. 40 Berkeley street and No. 68 Warrenton street, more than 250 young women are living, the last two addresses being those of "Y" homes.

THE LITTLE FOLK SHOP, No. 17, has "Everything for the Kiddies." The committee in charge includes Mrs. Thomas Logan, chairman; Miss Margaret Manning, assistant chairman; aides, Mrs. Jennie Chase, Mrs. Frank Brigham, Mrs. H. A. S. Reed, Mrs. C. E. Huston, Mrs. Arthur Donnel, Mrs. Cyrus Newbegen, Miss Etta Carrington, Mrs. G. A. Parsons, Mrs. Isaac Patch and others prominent in the work of the Massachusetts League of Women Voters.

ATLANTIC CITY BOARDWALK

Mechanics Building Dec. 1-9 Inclusive

THE FRANCES E. WILLARD SETTLEMENT, starting in three small rooms on Hanover street, which were used as lounging rooms for the girls who worked in the factories and shops of the district, has developed its work so that it now conducts a home for young working women at No. 44 Chambers street, Boston; a Summer camp for girls from the Settlement clubs, and a rest home for women between forty and sixty years of age at beautiful Llewsao Lodge, Bedford. The Industrial Centre at Bedford is designed to be of practical assistance, offering ways whereby members of the family can earn a part if not all of their board. It is now contemplating adding a home for incurable cripples and invalids.

SHOP DISPLAYS FASCINATE VISITORS

One of the features of the exposition that help to give the real Atlantic City atmosphere to the affair are the number of attractively designed shops, in which are displayed a variety of articles which exercise an almost irresistible appeal to the feminine heart.

Among the shops prominent in the exhibition are:

THE BOSTON SHOP, displaying nightgowns of charming daintiness, is under the direction of Mrs. Walter M. Pratt, chairman. The sub-committee in charge today will be the Dorchester League of Women Voters, Mrs. Richard J. McNulty, chairman. Tuesday, Mrs. M. C. Stackpole will be the chairman. Wednesday, Mrs. Frank B. Witherbee will have charge. Thursday, the Elm Hill League of Roxbury will have charge, and Friday the booth will be cared for by the Roslindale Branch and the Dorchester League jointly. On the final day, Mrs. Luther R. Nash will be the chairman.

One of the feature booths in "The Hut" is that maintained by the Massachusetts Association for Occupational Therapy. This booth is selling articles made by disabled war veterans, and has an unusually fine assortment of trays, rugs, baskets, toys, embroideries, woven bags, Southern bed spreads and the like. One of their choice offerings is a jar of perfume made from crushed flowers which were imported from France.

Booth 26 is devoted to the New England Moral Reform Society—the Talitha Cumi Maternity Home and Hospital, in particular. This institution, maintained at No. 215 Forest Hills street, Jamaica Plain, is represented at the booth by Miss Emerson, Miss Garrett, Mrs. William McKee, Mrs. Gayley, Mrs. Whiteside, Mrs. Oliver W. Mink, Mrs. Arthur Perry, Jr., Mrs. Gilman and Miss Pope.

The monkey speedway, where a collection of furry little simians, each bearing the name of some prominent stage or screen star, race madly around a race-track in their tiny automobiles, is proving one of the big attractions at the Midway. There are many other features, however, among which are the Laughing Gallery, the Mirror Show, the Oriental and American Museum, the Water show, with its diving acts, and the various booths with games of skill, refreshments and the like.

Other ladies who are assisting at the Gift Shop of the New England Hospital are: Miss Mary E. Wood of Brookline, Mrs. Thomas A. Watson, Mrs. William O. Blake, Mrs. George A. Dary, Mrs. Reuen Thomas, Mrs. Robert Casson, Mrs. Frank L. Marshall, Miss Jennie Moseley, Mrs. Fred B. Richardson, Mrs. William Skinner, Mrs. J. W. Moss, Mrs. C. H. Eglee, Miss Alice Rieker, Mrs. F. T. Drake, Mrs. George Anderson and Mrs. Frank Dunham.

The Sweetmeat Shop, where all kinds of candies, cakes and other delicacies are on sale, is another of the enterprises conducted by this organization. All sorts of chocolate cakes, cookies, home-made candies and the like are being retailed here. Mrs. James C. T. Baldwin and Mrs. Philip H. Sumner are the chairmen.

BREVITIES OF THE BOARDWALK

Much has been written concerning the vast industrial water power revelopments at Muscle Shoals, Alabama, but it remained for the Atlantic City Boardwalk to bring before the public of Boston first hand information and complete data of the history and future of this great industrial project. This unusual feature takes the form of the Muscle Shoals Intelligence Bureau, located at the entrance of the Boardwalk under the management of H. E. Warrington and J. M. Corbett, the latter well known locally, assisted by a group of well-informed and highly trained women who devote their time to personal interviews with those who seek knowledge of the various phases of this enterprise. It is interesting, even startling, to learn that, as a single aspect of the meaning of Muscle Shoals development in connection with its influence as an economic world factor, it is contemplated, by utilization of the vast power of Wilson Dam, now under active construction for electrical smelting, together with the raw material and natural resources, such as iron ore, bauxite (aluminum) and other metals essential to metal manufacturing (all of which are abundant in the immediate vicinity), the United States will be placed in much the same envied position in regard to world competition in manufactured steel products that Germany built prior to the World War, and which in turn was a direct outcome of the scientific developments of Essen and the great Ruhr Valley.

There are so many new and interesting features to be learned in connection with the proposed programs at Muscle Shoals that it is well worth while to pay a visit to the Muscle Shoals Intelligence Bureau during the remaining days of the Board-walk.

ABUNDANCE OF CHOICE XMAS PRESENTS

Among all of the features of the Boardwalk, the one that is attracting the most attention of all, apparently, is the Hut, a carefully arranged restaurant which is being conducted by Mrs. Clarence R. Edwards and Mrs. Larz Anderson. This restaurant offers a menu of great variety and unsurpassable quality, with everything from chicken a la Maryland, and Southern waffles to a New England boiled dinner and oysters on the half shell. All of the proceeds from this restaurant go to the disabled ex-service men. On the opening night a special dinner was given in the Hut to Governor and Mrs. Cox.

One of the most attractive of all the booths is that conducted by Jays, at No. 27, the Boardwalk. A special decorator has been sent out to make this booth as enticing as possible, and his efforts have succeeded to a surprising extent. This shop specializes in women's apparel, and has a large assortment of coats, dresses, suits, sweaters, skirts, scarfs, blouses and the like to delight the eyes of its feminine customers.

Two booths are maintained by the New England Peabody Home for Crippled Children. One of them is a regular, old-time "Country Store," at No. 81, where Mrs. Arthur L. Race presides over the sale of a miscellaneous lot of offerings. The other is a shop at No. 24, where baskets, fancy work and things made by the crippled children at the home are for sale. Mrs. Edward B. Kellog is in charge of this booth.

One of the most interesting exhibits is that of the Pepperell Spring Water Company, who have on exhibition the medal and diploma won at the Louisiana Purchase Exposition, where the foremost waters of the country were on display. Pepperell is made at Pepperell Springs, forty-four miles from Boston, where they have one of the most modern equipped plants in the United States. The spring nestles among immense forests of pines and firs, ideally located for an auto ride to the home of the perfect product. Call at 95 Midway and become acquainted. Always on display and served cold in any flavor.

A remarkable collection of rich and rare Brittany china, much of it selected in France by Mrs. Larz Anderson during her recent trip abroad, is on display at booth No. 32, maintained by the Ways and Means Committee of the Massachusetts League of Women Voters. This china is delicate and fine enough to grace a private collection, and is constantly surrounded by a group of admiring purchasers. Mrs. B. F. Pitman and Mrs. Jesse P. Lyman are in charge here.

PROMINENT AMONG WORKERS WHO MADE BOARDWALK SUCCESS

CONSPICUOUS FOR ABILITY SHOWN IN ARRANGING EXHIBITION

Mrs. Benjamin Franklin Pitman (at upper left), who originated the idea of bringing boardwalk to Boston and who has been tireless in making the exposition a success. In circle, Mrs. Channing Cox, president of the Honorary Committee. Miss Fanny Osgood (at lower left), treasurer of the Atlantic City Boardwalk of Boston, who is responsible for the important financial details connected with the show. Mrs. Walter M. Pratt (at right), as chairman of the Publicity Committee, originated many novel ideas for arousing public interest in the event.

The Massachusetts League of Women Voters maintain shops at booths numbered 28, 32, 69, 34, 17, 35, 57, 23 and 74 on the boardwalk, where can be purchased salt water taffy, baby clothes, Brittany china, brass and linen, paper novelties, puffs and blankets, baskets, kitchen supplies, Oriental sweets, laces and embroideries. Prices are low and the quality is unsurpassed.

A booth devoted "To the Quest for the Beautiful" is shop seventy-seven—that of Elizabeth Arden of the Salon D'Oro. Attendants at this shop specialize in methods of gaining and retaining facial and bodily beauty and have suggestions and hints for their clients. The shop has a complete home course for the care of the skin and hair.

One of the most notable exhibits at the show is that of the New England Hospital for Women and Children. A number of nurses from the hospital, clad in their quiet blue-and-white striped uniforms, help to attract attention to the nine booths which this organization is maintaining. This staff is selling toys, and is in charge of Dr. Florence W. Duckering, Dr. Alice H. Bigelow, Dr. Esther Sundelof, Dr. Loretta J. Cummins, Dr. Mary Wright, Dr. Blanche Atwood, Dr. Nannie L. Winn, Dr. Maud Carvill and Dr. Marjorie Woodman.

HOW IDEA ORIGINATED.

The idea of the spectacular reproduction of the Atlantic City Boardwalk in Boston came to Mrs. Benjamin F. Pitman and other women interested in the welfare of the organizations, as a means of solving the financial problems which confronted them. The Atlantic City spectacle was chosen over a similar one, known as "The Streets of Paris," because Atlantic City is one of America's social playgrounds and because it was believed it would have more of a patriotic appeal than any other. Moreover the same exposition has been held in Chicago, where more than $90,000 was cleared for charity.

WOMAN SLAIN, BODY BURIED IN SWAMP

Chicago, Dec. 4.—Police are confronted with a baffling mystery in the finding of the body of an unidentified woman about forty-five years old in a swamp in the Calumet River district. Investigators announced they were certain the woman was murdered and her body brought to the swamp.

They declared several persons must have been involved in it since no one person could have placed the body as it was found.

MRS. EMILY BEACH DIES IN NEW YORK

New York, Dec. 4.—Mrs. Emily Beach, for many years a famous horse woman of New York and Newport, is dead. She was seventy-five years old, and a widow of Treat S. Beach, for many years a member of he New York Stock Exchange. She was a granddaughter of Samue Peck, a famous horseman of Peck Hill, Ct., and a cousin of Henr Ward Beecher.

RULES POLICE MUST PUNISH ACTS OF KLAN

Washington, Dec. 4.—Alleged illeal acts attributed to the Ku Klux Klan fall within the police power of he several States, Attorney-General Daugherty has informed Senator Walsh of Massachusetts, in reply to in inquiry, and the United States has no jurisdiction over such maters.

The Department of Justice has had the conduct of the Ku Klux Klan before it for more than a year, Mr. Daugherty said, but has not been able to find a single case which would bring the organization within the jurisdiction of the Federal government. He assured Senator Walsh that if any such case arose the government would proceed to vigorously prosecute the offending organization r individuals.

Constantine and brother to the prince that married the American tin plate fortune.

If the Greeks had known enough to get rid of all their royalties, wholesale, after the war, they would have been spared exiling them now, and shooting, retail, former cabinet ministers and military officers.

The horror is not so great, however. If those royalties could calmly send thousands to be killed and to kill others, while keeping their own carcasses safe, there is no good reason for not exiling — even shooting—them. If there is truth in the charge that Andrew took bribes from the Turks and sent 40,000 Greeks across the desert to be butchered, shooting would have much too good for him.

The Greek killings, based really on injured national vanity, are shocking, but they may usefully warn other royalties.

THERE IS reported from London a French-German combination in steel manufacturing to exceed in size and power United States Steel itself. It will have to be big and complete for that program. The United States Steel Company alone is bigger than all the German steel companies combined and, quite important, United States Steel has on hand, in cash and government bonds, something like $500,000,000, a good nest egg for an international fight.

If the French and Germans would combine, industrially, instead of trying to rise by tramping each other down, it would be a good thing for both. Magnanimity after victory, as the Romans learned two thousand years ago, is the best policy.

SIR DAVID LLEWELLYN, Welsh coal king, says he can ship coal to Canada from Wales more cheaply than it can be shipped from Pennsylvania mines. That interests American consumers, who pay $15 for coal that costs $2 to produce. Here in America the same set of men largely own the railroads and the mines and are interested in getting as much as possible out of both.

Any little child can get one of those wonder dolls. All that is necessary is to get ten subscriptions for six months to The Boston American and the Doll Editor will see that the lucky kiddie gets her "Mama" dol ight away.

SUICIDE LEAPS TO DEATH IN HARBOR

An unidentified man loitering about the stern of the "Narrow Gauge" ferryboat Brewster today suddenly ran to the railing, leaped over and plunged into the harbor when the boat was about 400 feet from the Leyland line docks, East Boston.

John F. Deero of No. 377 Maverick street, East Boston, one of the few passengers outside, saw the man jump, and shouted.

Captain William Nelson stopped the boat and George McCarthy, Charles Chamberlain and Edwin Weeks lowered a lifeboat. They searched for a half hour. No trace of the man could be found.

Word was sent to the harbor police. Lieutenant Swendeman and Sergeant Dunn in the police boat made a fruitless search.

Despondent South End Man Hangs Himself

The body of Louis Englehardt, a cabinet maker, fifty-three years old, was found hanging from a bedpost in his room at No. 70 Waltham street, South End, today, by Thomas A. Caesar, the landlord. Despondency from lack of work is thought to have driven Englehardt to suicide. He is said to have had a wife and children in Providence.

THREE EXPOSED IN ROBBERY BY CIGAR

One cigar led to three young men being found guilty in Newton court today of a break at Joseph Marchant's sgtore, No. 284 Corbit street, Newton, and larceny of $100 worth of cigars, cigarettes and provisions.

The three are Frank L. Wellford, Beach street; Thomas Murphy, Jassett street, and Patrick Gilmore, Adams street, all in Newton.

Police search at urphy's home discovered nothing until an unsmoked cigar was found on the cellar floor. The police dug and found a "cache" of half the stuff taken from Marchant's store.

Murphy and Gilmore pleaded guilty to the break but blamed Wellford, saying he suggested and planned it, gave them drinks to get their courage up, then ledthem to the store and directed the job.

Wellford pleaded not guilty but admitted he was intoxicated that night.

Murphy and Gilmore received six months' suspended sentences and Wellford a year's suspended sentence. The court was saying that restitution must be made for the missing half of the stolen goods when Murphy broke in:

"Ten cases of Jamaica ginger are missing."

Marchant, the storekeeper, shouted: "I never had any Jamaica ginger."

FLANAGAN DIVORCE CASE TO BE REOPENED

A reopening of the divorce case of Dr. Frank J. Flanagan, of the Animal Rescue League, against his wife, Mrs. Mabel Flanagan, will come up early this month in the Suffolk Divorce Court.

Mrs. M. Flanagan

Dr. Flanagan charged his wife with infidelity and was granted a decree nisi and the custody of two minor children. Mrs. Flanagan has filed affidavit in Superior Court contending that her husband's divorce should not become absolute. She had previously charged that the testimony given by her husband's witnesses, in some cases, was false.

WOMAN IS CAUGHT IN SWINDLE

Mrs. Ruth Ruickholdt, Out of Prison, Is Arrested for Blackmail Again

One more chapter is being written in the checkered history of Mrs. Ruth Ruickholdt, thirty-eight, comely wife of a wealthy New Haven physician who prefers the ways of crime to respectability.

The one-time pseudo Boston heiress and philanthropist is in jail in Hartford, Ct., charged with fleecing a wealthy resident of some hundred of dollars through blackmail.

Her present difficulty is likely to result in her being returned to Auburn, N. Y., prison to serve the balance of an unexpired term for the [illegible] larceny of diamonds [illegible]

ONCE A CANDY GIRL.

The history of Mrs. Ruickholdt is amazing. She came from the town of Waterford [illegible] of considerable beauty [illegible] New London, Ct., and there obtained a position as clerk in a candy shop.

In a short while she had all the gay youths of the city trailing her and Ruth, the country girl, became the talk of the town. It was then that she won a newspaper contest as the most popular girl in town and so went to Washington, D. C.

It was there that she met with a dashing navy officer and a romance began that ended more or less disastrously for the girl. Her downfall started then.

CREATURE OF THE CAFES

Then she went to a business man with a tale of woe, to the effect a friend of hers had to raise $2,500 to meet a mortgage and that she had advanced $1,000 and another friend had contributed $1,000 but they did not know how they could [illegible] remaining $500.

Eventually the business man was talked into parting with $250, which he has never recovered. Mrs. Ruickholdt impressed on him the need of keeping the debt secret from her husband and in this manner avoided detection for a long period.

Shortly after the New Haven newspapers blossomed forth with lengthy interviews with a "noted Kentucky belle," registered at the Taft Hotel. This beautiful woman of wealth compared New England girls with their Kentucky sisters for some several columns. She was much sought after and invited to exclusive homes and was royally entertained by such Yale men as she cared to have around.

Came then a sudden disappearance of the "Kentucky heiress" and incidentally scores of bills from various establishments. The Taft was stuck. Not long after a detective from the hotel walked through a department store. There was Ruth Champion, erstwhile heiress, selling neckties.

COMES TO BOSTON.

Some time after she married Dr. Charles Ruickholdt of New Haven she came to Boston with her husband and stayed at the Hotel Avery. Then she victimized certain of her Boston friends.

Going to New London, she communicated with Tiffany's in New York and ordered a large number of diamonds sent to New London. Police arrested her when she attempted to claim the package at the post-office. For this she was sentenced to Auburn prison.

$1,000 BILL TOO BIG FOR WIFE OF OIL MAGNATE

One thousand dollars—and no way to spend it.

That was the horrible plight of [illegible] Mrs. Marion Smith [illegible] sailed from Commonwealth Pier aboard the S. S. Arabic. For Mrs. Smith walked gaily up the gangplank with a $1,000 bill in hand.

Then she tried to buy a box of chocolates, and newspaper, and some magazines. She couldn't. Because nobody could change the $1,000 bill.

"I wish my husband had showed [illegible] of one $1,000 bill," wailed the pretty young wife. "Now it looks as if I were going to be broke. I'd almost be willing to swap the old bill for something I could eat."

BLAMES TABLETS FOR LOSS OF MEMORY

Mystery surrounding the collapse of Mrs. Madeline Prentiss, No. 18 Wentworth street, Dorchester, in Central Square, Lynn, Sunday, was cleared up today, when Mrs. Prentiss recovered enough to go to her home. She explained to the Lynn police that she had taken some headache tablets and that her mind had shortly afterward become a blank. Mrs. Prentiss was found wandering about by Patrolman Ames and fainted while the officer was talking to her.

GOODWIN TO NAME 'LOBBYIST'

Registrar Says He Will Tell When Tail-Light Hearing Comes, Wednesday

Frank A. Goodwin, State registrar of motor vehicles, today threatened to make known the name of "a notorious lobbyist," whom he charges with causing all the row over the new auto tail light law, when he appears before the Governor and his Council Wednesday.

"I decline to state the name at present," said Mr. Goodwin, "but I am sick and tired of all this [illegible] which has been cast against me and I will name the person [illegible] Wednesday.

"A notorious lobbyist, who has worn beaten paths through the corridors of the State House for twenty-five years or more is disappointed.

"He tried to get the legislature to pass the bill in such form that his lamp holder would have to be used. When he failed in that and the manner of enforcing was left to my discretion he tried to get me to carry out his purpose.

"Instead, however, of the 400,000 motorists having to pay tribute to him, they may buy, at the present time, any one of the forty-three approved lamps and before long any one of 100."

In view of Mr. Goodwin's statement some of the history of the legislation on auto tail lights is interesting. It was recalled today that among those appearing before the committee of the legislature was Benjamin Gibby, who has been a State House lobbyist for a long time.

Mr. Gibby demonstrated his rear lamp to the Committee which was considering the legislation which resulted in the passage of the present rear-lamp law. Mr. Goodwin attended the hearing and protested that the adoption of any law which would legalize Mr. Gibby's lamp alone would cause the State to abandon its project of having the number plates made at the State Prison.

The motorist would be forced to buy not only Mr. Gibby's rear lamp but the number plates from him as well, Goodwin said.

The present legislation was reported out of the Committee on the basis of two bills—one by Senator Silas D. Reed of Taunton, requiring illuminated number plates to be approved by the Registrar, the other a bill filed by Robert C. Murray of No. 718 Columbia Road, Dorchester, which required that the light on the rear should make the number plate visible for a distance of 150 feet at night.

The 150-foot bill was rejected and one reported requiring the number visible for a distance of sixty feet.

TUBERCULOSIS FIGHT SLOWLY BEING WON

Washington, Dec. 4.—The fight against tuberculosis is gradually being won, it would appear from figures made public by the Bureau of the Census today. During 1921 the tuberculosis death rate in the thirty-four States comprising the registration area was 99.4 per 100,000 population, as compared with 114.2 the preceding year.

"EASIEST WAY" GIRL IN BRIGHTON COURT

JUNE REYNOLDS

She was arrested in an Allston apartment, on a charge of being idle and disorderly. Last May she was acquitted of blackmail charges made by Daniel Grimes of Manchester, N. H., who had a love affair with her.

JUNE REYNOLDS SOBS IN COURT AFTER ARREST

June Reynolds, who tried to die when her love affair with Daniel Grimes, wealthy Manchester, N. H., restaurant man, came to an unhappy end and was later cleared of blackmail charges instituted by Grimes, was in Brighton court today charged with being idle and disorderly. She was arrested with Jesse Heustis and Mary Whalen in an apartment at No. 1407 Commonwealth avenue, Allston.

Huestis and June Reynolds have been living together at the Commonwealth avenue address, according to the police. Miss Whalen rents from them. Huestis is charged with a statutory offence and also with assault on Miss Whalen.

The story of June Reynolds' downfall starts with the day she went to work in a restaurant owned by Daniel Grimes in Manchester. She and Grimes became intimate friends and the girl was happy for four years. Then Grimes told her that he could not marry "a working girl" and gave her money to go to the Pacific Coast and start life anew. But June had learned to love too well and came to Boston.

Grimes refused to have anything more to do with June and she attempted suicide. For weeks June lay between life and death in the City Hospital. When she recovered she faced a blackmail charge brought by Grimes. The Grand Jury cleared June and she determined to try life anew. The battle proved too hard and she finally chose "the easiest way."

She sobbed in court today as she waited for her case to be called. Final hearing on her case will be held later in the week.

AT PEACE WITH GIRL'S FATHER, SAYS MELLOR

Dan Cupid has not been "K. O.'d" by a policeman-father-in-law to be, in the case of Alfred S. Mellor of No. 16 Sargent avenue, Somerville, and Miss Helena Gertrude Merchant of No. 62 Saunders street, Allston.

And the wedding bells will ring out "some day" for the couple.

Indignant denial was made to a Boston American reporter today by the prospective husband that he had quit his intention of marrying the daughter of Police Sergeant Bartholomew Merchant of the Brighton station, because he feared that the father would "make little pieces out of him."

"I talked with Sergeant Merchant a few minutes ago and he denied giving out any statements that he would make small pieces out of me if I tried to marry his daughter."

"Furthermore, the story that I filed marriage intentions in Providence to escape the father is false. Miss Merchant and I went to Providence so that we might escape the publicity. I am a divorced man and statements that I am at present a married man are wrong."

To prove his statement he exhibited a copy of the marriage intention, which bore his and Miss Merchant's signatures.

"True, the wedding bells will not ring out tonight. We only filed intentions last Saturday and we are going to wait, of course, until the five-day law has expired before we are married. Just when we will marry is nobody's business but our own.

"Furthermore, you can say that I have not disappeared, as was stated in one Boston paper. You can see that for yourself."

Mellor is a mechanical engineer holding a responsible position.

FIGHTS OFF ASSAILANT IN DARK

South End Man, Held for the Holdup, Claims He Can Produce Alibi

Seized by a man as she was walking along a dark street, late at night, dragged into a doorway and robbed of her pocketbook, worth $20, and $73 in cash, was the story told by Miss Elizabeth Ferguson of No. 47 Gates street, South Boston.

Patrick McCarron of Tremont street, South End, thirty-three years old, who was charged with the robbery, appeared in the Municipal Court today.

The girl, still bearing marks of the struggle, told of her fight with the robber. She said they fought all over the sidewalk and doorway until she finally freed herself. Thereupon the robber fled.

McCarron, who was later arrested by Patrolman William B. Lee of the East Dedham street station, asked for a continuance, claiming he could furnish an alibi that would establish his innocence. The continuance was granted by Chief Justice Bolster.

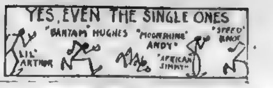
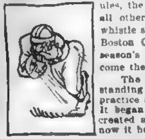
BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTS



CHARLES E. PARKER NAMES ALL-AMERICA ELEVEN

OWEN IS FULLBACK ON MYTHICAL OUTFIT

By CHARLES E. PARKER.



Although it is true, the mighty sons of Gonzaga and of two or three other Siwash institutions still face the concluding games of their schedules, the football season of 1922 came to a close, to all other intents and purposes, when the referee's whistle signaled the ending of the annual Holy Cross-Boston College game at Braves Field. Before the season's record is complete, however, there must come the announcement of the All-American eleven.

The theoretical assembling of football's outstanding stars each year has become a time-honored practice among football experts, alleged or otherwise. It began many years ago and, as it was continued, created a demand for its further continuance until now it has become an accepted football institution.

Of course it is not physically possible for one individual to see all the players in all their games. But it is physically possible to organize a scouting staff of football authorities in each section of the country, and it is physically possible to keep a file of the newspaper accounts of each game. Then when the several authorities in each section agree on the ability of a player, and their reports and the newspaper accounts reveal that player's record for the season, it is possible to compare his record with that of rival candidates for the particular position at issue.

Fine Distinctions Made In Selecting Eleven

That is the method used in selecting the accompanying teams.

In some instances the players selected stand out as the unquestionable leaders in their positions; in others, players of about equal ability appear as candidates and finer distinctions must be made. In the latter, the player's value to his team and the record made by that team are allowed to influence close decisions.

In assembling our information we are greatly indebted to the following: L. B. St. John, athletic director, Ohio State; W. A. Alexander, head coach, Georgia Tech; Andy Smith, head coach, California; Alonzo A. Stagg, athletic director, Chicago; Dan McGugin, head coach, Vanderbilt; Glenn Warner, head coach, Pittsburgh; Howard H. Jones, athletic director, Iowa; Frank B. Bridges, head coach, Baylor; Dr. Clarence W. Spears, head coach, West Virginia; Knute K. Rockne, athletic director, Notre Dame; "Shy" Huntington, head coach, Oregon; E. B. Clarkson, head coach, Virginia Military; Paul Hinkle, assistant coach, Butler; Dr. Edward J. O'Brien, referee in many of the most important games in the East, and Norman Bankart, who officiated in both Eastern and Middle West contests.

Now for the team.

Bomar and Goebel Selected as Ends

The ends selected are Bomar of Vanderbilt and Goebel of Michigan.

The ideal wingman in modern football is on who possesses size as well as speed and skill in end play, and in Bomar and Goebel we find two such men.

Bomar, who strips at an even 200 pounds, is probably the greatest flanker of the season. He can pick forward passes out of the high heavens, for he stands well over six feet and has the power and size to wreck the strongest off tackle plays, and he has done those very things many times in the course of Vanderbilt's victorious season. Bomar is surprisingly fast for his size, is always down under punts, is a neat blocker when on the offense and has proved unflankable on the defense, while his record for completing forward passes is the best of any wingman in the land.

Goebel, who led Michigan's great eleven to a tie for the Western Conference championship is a 192 pounder and another sweet wingman. In addition to his mastery of all departments of wing play, he was Michigan's best placement kicker and an accurate thrower as well as a nifty receiver of forwards.

Muller, the huge Californian, who showed a return to his excellent form of two seasons ago; Taylor, the Navy's brilliant wingman; Tedhell of Wisconsin and Lynch of Dartmouth, are but a few of the many sterling players who pressed Goebel and Bomar for top honors.

Winning the tackle berths are Gullan of Brown and Treat of Princeton.

Gulian, a 210-pounder, rounded out the final year of his brilliant career with the best brand of tackle play seen in the East, and this season the East has developed the greatest array of tackles in its history. The great defensive record of the Brown team has been due, to a considerable degree, to Gulian's great play. He knows his job and has the weight, strength, speed and skill to accomplish it despite the fact he has been a marked man in each game.

Treat Big Factor in Success of Tigers.

Treat, an able man in all departments of tackle play, has proved a prime factor in Princeton's victorious season. His alertness and nose for the ball have more than compensated for Princeton's lack of offensive strength, for in several important games Treat's recovery of fumbles placed the Tigers in positions for easy scores. He also was used effectively as a receiver of forward passes. Treat weighs 187 pounds.

In both instances the first team tackles barely nosed out able rivals. Neidlinger of Dartmouth, Sonnenberg of Detroit, Baker of Princeton, Deible of Lafayette, Thompson of Iowa and Thurman of Pennsylvania all made powerful bids for the positions.

The guards are Schwab of Lafayette and Minnick of Iowa.

Schwab, a unanimous choice last year and probably so this season lived well up to his reputation of being the greatest guard in the country. His 205 pounds of intelligently co-ordinated brawn proved bad business for all opponents and proved a mighty important asset to Lafayette in its most impressive season.

Minnick, who was seen by many Easterners at the Yale Bowl this year, but slightly undermarks the Lafayette man. His weight is 195 pounds, and in addition to his great ability as a lineman, Minnick is a better than average punter, and has figured in many telling gains in runs from kick formations.

Setron of West Virginia, who has picked up many of "Cutie" Spears' qualities, Sack of Pittsburgh; Degree of Notre Dame; Hubbard of Harvard, McMillan of Illinois; Welsh of Colgate; Flynn of Cornell and Pixley of Ohio State were the men Minnick was forced to beat in winning the position.

King of Chicago Leading Center

The centre assignment goes to King of Chicago.

There have been few exceptional pivot men this season, and King easily tops the few. He weighs 235 pounds, has been a steady, accurate passer, a good offensive blocker and a powerful and intelligent defensive player. Chicago made its big mistake in the Princeton game this year when, after gaining an eleven-point lead, it removed King from the lineup, for on the very next play King's substitute made a wild pass which Princeton turned into a touchdown.

Other centres of better than average ability are Lovejoy of Yale, Kubale of Centre; DeGroot of Stanford, and Moore of Dartmouth.

To Pfann of Cornell goes the quarterback assignment.

Pfann proved the one quarterback of the year who, in game after game, got all that was possible out of his team. There were many other able field generals but each, in the course of the season, lapsed to mediocrity in one or more games. Pfann weighs 170 pounds, and in addition to an ability to handle and direct his team, he can throw or receive forward passes, scoot through a broken field, and do a bit of punting and drop kicking.

Gorman of Princeton, had he exhibited throughout the season as he did in the Chicago and Yale games, would have made the task of selecting the quarterback a most difficult one. Others to press Pfann for the honor were Smythe of the Army, Eckberg of West Virginia, Middlesworth, Butler; Buell, Harvard, Parkin, Iowa, Gooch of Vermont and Mullville, Georgia.

Kipke of Michigan and Kaw of Cornell are the All-America halfbacks.

Kipke weighs 162 pounds, is a great broken field runner, an excellent punter and drop kicker, an accurate forward passer, and the smartest defensive player in the West. He has been the backbone of the Michigan offence and the greatest single factor in Michigan's winning season.

Kaw weighs close to 176 and is probably the strongest, shiftiest and most dangerous runner in the country, as well as a punter and forward passer of exceptional ability. He has been the king pin of Cornell's crushing attack, and his high knee action, nifty footwork, beautiful straight-arming, tremendous speed and power, win him first team honors without question.

And what an exceptional field do Kipke and Kaw lead. Brunner of Lafayette, the high scoring back of the East, who surpassed his great teammate Gazella in the fight for honors, Castner, Notre Dame's great triple threat; Locke, the high scoring back of the Western Conference; Barron of Georgia Tech and the leading back in the South; Zell of Washington, Neely of Vanderbilt, Williams of Wisconsin; Darling of Boston College, are but a few of the many who missed preference by narrow margins.

Owen of Harvard Is Brilliant Fullback

To Owen of Harvard goes the fullback berth.

Owen thus resumes the position he won on our "All" eleven last Fall. It is our custom to allot the fullback position to a specialist in line-crashing, interference-making and defensive work. Owen does all these as well or better than his rivals for the position, and besides can skip through a broken field, throw and receive forward passes, and place kick, as well as punt and drop kick. He weighs 192 pounds and is our idea of a most valuable football player.

Morrison, of Andy Smith's champion California array is Owen's chief rival, and is another back of the same type. John Thomas of Chicago, who probably is the greatest line buster in the land, falls below both Owen and Morrison in defensive play and in all around accomplishment while others just nosed out are White of Virginia Military, Howitt of Pittsburgh, Jordan of Yale and Hartley of Nebraska.

The first "All" team, amply supplied with specialists in punting, dropkicking, placement kicking, forward pass throwing and receiving, and the ablest position play in each of the eleven places, shows an average weight of 206 pounds from tackle to tackle, and 203 pounds from end to end, while the backfield will average 175 pounds.

The second team averages 194 pounds from end to end, and 170 pounds in the backfield, while the third team would average 194 from end to end and 178 in the backfield.

AMATEURS READY FOR DILBOY SHOW

Of the many amateur boxing tournaments staged around Greater Boston this week, from all indications the one under the auspices of George Dilboy Post, V. F. W. in K. of C. Hall, Somerville, Thursday evening, will prove one of the best ever held by this organization. Entries from the top notchers of each of the following classes have been received, viz 112, 126, 135, 147 pounds and heavyweight and the fans who journey to Somerville can rest assured of witnessing the usual good show for which this organization has become popular.

With the reappearance of Young Zarko, 112 pound amateur champion of Manchester, N. H., practically assured, competition in this class is bound to be keen, as the local boys are very desirous of taking him into camp.

JOHNSON FIRES BROADSIDE AT LANDIS

New York, Dec. 4.—Ban Johnson, head of the American League, shattered the peace and quiet of baseball circles by announcing officially that the annual December meeting of that organization will be held in Chicago not New York, on Wednesday, December 13.

The news, which came in a press dispatch from Chicago, will be a surprise even to Judge K. M. Landis whose plans are thereby knocked pa[illegible] west.

In fact, the plans of both the National and American League for the annual meeting are completely ruined by Johnson's action, which many attributed to pique against Judge Landis.

Under original specifications the National League was to meet here on Tuesday, December 12, the American League on the 13th and the two together in a joint assemblage on the 14th. Going on the assumption that Johnson would call his meeting for [illegible]

LEE ANDERSON BOBS UP AGAIN AND HE DEMANDS ACTION

NEGRO FIGHTER NOW ON WAY TO BOSTON

By JACK CONWAY.

The lost fighter has been found. And there is great rejoicing in the land of left hooks and right hand smashes.

Lee Anderson

Lee Anderson, missing since shortly after his sensational battle with Kid Norfolk at the Arena, has been located at Calixico, Cal. He has been adjusting the sale of some property he owns in that fair hamlet.

"Leaving for Boston today," is the wire from Anderson that revealed the whereabouts of the negro light-heavyweight.

"Will be ready to battle Norfolk, Greb, Brennan or Siki after a week's training," continues the telegram.

Very good. Our Boston matchmakers will be pleased with this news.

Anderson is one of the world's leading light-heavyweights. His bout with Norfolk at the Arena was one of the most torrid affairs ever staged in this city.

For five rounds the rivals tossed punches with great abandon. Norfolk then forged ahead and won one of those hairline decisions.

* * *

Speaking of fighters recalls to mind a new story they are telling about Bob Lee, negro heavyweight.

When Leo Flynn, manager of Kid Norfolk, was in Boston recently, Lee asked Flynn to give him a chance at the Black Panther.

"I'll fight if guaranteed $2,000," whispered Robert.

"But Norfolk will only fight you on a winner take all basis," replied Flynn.

"Why, Mister Flynn," resumed Lee with great seriousness, "I ain't no hog. That boy Norfolk deserves something for fighting."

* * *

Tex Rickard's shows at Madison Square Garden are running for Sweeney. The New York Boxing Commission has put up the bars on about every fighter worth while, with the result that Rickard has fallen back on the ham and egg league with poor results for the box office.

* * *

Pancho Villa, world's flyweight champion, cannot fight bantamweights in New York, even though he can conquer any bantamweight in the world.

* * *

Johnny Kilbane, featherweight champion, has been kayoed in New York with the Ko-Koo-Klan.

* * *

Benny Leonard, lightweight boss, is on the sick list.

* * *

Mickey Walker, welterweight champion, isn't prepared to risk his title just now.

* * *

Johnny Wilson, middleweight king, rates as well in New York as a German mark does on Wall Street.

* * *

Harry Greb, light heavyweight champion, isn't worth a dime at the box office unless pitted against a headliner like Kid Norfolk. And Greb doesn't care to battle Norfolk.

* * *

Jack Dempsey has been barred from knocking out heavyweights in New York.

* * *

How would you like to be paying the rent at the Garden under these conditions

* * *

George Kotsonaros remarks modestly:

"Caiza is a joke as a champion."

How unsympathetic!

* * *

"That's what Jimmy Londes said," replies Caiza, as he grins.

* * *

Massachusetts, with a sane Boxing Commission, has been getting much better ring matches than New York. Which is as it ought to be.

Title Game Tie

The Shamrocks and Ramblers played a 7-7 tie in an effort to decide the 110 pound championship of Roxbury. The game at Longwood Field attracted a big crowd.

SISLER AT TOP OF A. L. BAT WIELDERS

Three Red Sox regulars, Harris, Burns and Pratt, parked themselves in the official .300 batting class of the American League. The former Indian cracked the onion for .316, Burns clicked 'em for .306 and Pratt, now a Tiger, squeezed in with .302.

George Sisler.

George Sisler led the league easily, having quite a margin on Ty Cobb, who whirled once more into the .400 class, a truly remarkable feat for a veteran of his years of service.

The St. Louis first sacker made 246 base hits and scored 134 runs, leading the parade easily in both respects. Following are the leading ten regulars in the list:

	G.	A.B.	H.	Av.
Sisler, St. Louis	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Cobb, Detroit	137	[illegible]	211	.401
Speaker, Cleveland	131	429	161	[illegible]
Heilman, Detroit	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Miller, Athletics	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]

Veach, Detroit	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Galloway, Athletics	155	571	185	[illegible]

The averages of the other Red Sox were as follows: Menosky, .283; J Collins, .271; O'Rourke, .264; Fewster, .260; Pittenger, .259; Leibold, .258, Ruel, .256; Fullerton, .250; Mitchell, .245 Miller, .232, Karr, .314; Walters, .194 Chaplin, .189 W Collins, .158, Piercy, .148; Pennock, .138; Ferguson, .092.

The Browns led in club batting with a mark of .313, while the Tigers also managed to get over the magic mark and hit collectively for .306. The Red Sox were last with an average of .263.

HARRY BROWN TO BATTLE AT ARMORY A.A.

Harry (Kid) Brown, brilliant Philadelphia boxer, will parade back into our midst Wednesday night when he quarrels with Tony Julian of Brockton in a ten round bout at the Armory A. A.'s show at the Grand Opera House.

Harry Kid Brown

Brown has his sails set for a match with Johnny Dundee, who signs himself "junior lightweight champion of the world."

The youthful Philadelphian has staged some of his greatest battles in this city. The fans will remember him for his torrid engagements with Johnny Mooney, Jimmy Sacco and Vincent (Pepper) Martin.

Julian, one of the best of our New England lightweights, is sure to give Brown a merry tussle.

There will also be three 8-round prelims. The semi-final will feature Tibble Lawrey of Malden, conqueror of Frank Merna of South Boston, and Willie Gare of the North End. Kid Green of the South End will meet Tommy Murphy of Cambridge, while Eddie Williams of East Boston will oppose Al Lewis of the South End.

MINORS TO DISCUSS DRAFT THIS WEEK

Chicago, Dec. 4.—Louisville, Ky., will be the mecca of baseball men December 5, 6 and 7, when club owners of the minor leagues from all parts of the country gather to attend the annual meeting of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues. Numerous ball players and major league club owners also are expected to be in attendance and a number of trades probably will be made.

The draft, the "play off series" between clubs where the split season is in vogue; acceptance of players on option and the question of whether a club is entitled to a player's services before his contract has been recorded, are among some of the important subjects to come up for discussion.

M. H. Sexton, president of the National Association, in a letter to the minor league club owners, asked that all members come to the meeting prepared to discuss problems for the betterment of baseball.

The draft, which is not recognized by all the leagues, undoubtedly will bear the brunt of the discussions. The outcome of this question is dubious. Mr. Sexton, in his letter, asked "if it would not be better to go back to the old plan of permitting all clubs of higher classification, now entitled to the privilege, to draft, without restriction, from any club in Class C or D, the draft in Class B clubs only to be limited?"

A remedy is sought by Mr. Sexton to check the activity of clubs in indiscriminately signing young players who have little or no chance to make good in those leagues.

Etiquette for Calls From the Stone Age Down

By Les Conklin

THE origin of the social call dates from the Stone Age, when the head of a family used to leave a roughly carved block of stone at the door of another, as an expression of goodwill and friendship. Nowadays the caller either throws the stone at his neighbor's head or heaves it through the plate-glass window.

A few women call on their next-door neighbors out of pure friendship, but most of them drop in just to see if they can learn any of the family secrets.

A modern woman does not consider a call a success unless she finds out how much money her neighbor's husband is making, whether she does her own washing or not, and how much she owes on the furniture.

There are some callers who are always polite. This group includes book agents, stock salesmen, confidence men and tramps.

The only time most husbands go calling is when they want to borrow a lawn-mower.

When a man and his wife go calling, they like to inspect different parts of the house. The woman generally likes to look at the furniture, but the man always makes a bee line for the cellar.

A woman generally calls in the afternoon. The only time a man ever calls is in a poker game.

The problem of how often to make a call is largely a matter of taste. A doctor, for instance, should call as often as he thinks his patient will stand for it.

A book agent should always make a point of calling when the man of the house is not at home.

It used to be the custom for a minister to call on the members of the flock who failed to show up at church. But nowadays it would take him too long to make the rounds.

It is also considered bad form for an undertaker to call on a sick friend.

Etiquette says that a call should never last more than an hour, but it is hard for most women to conform to a rule like that. Once they get talking the sky is the limit as far as time is concerned.

When a man goes calling he should always take a suitcase with him. It may come in handy if he gets a chance to make away with a few lumps of coal.

When a young man goes calling on his girl he should take a box of candy for her and a box of cigars for her father. He may also take a cane to chase his girl's kid brother out from under the parlor davenport.

It is not necessary to take anything for her mother, because he will never be able to make friends with her anyway.

FOR BRAINY PEOPLE

By Prof. Peter P. Pumperdinks, C. O. D., R. S. V. P.

Q.—When do men first begin to love dumb animals?

A.—Right after they're married.

Q.—I am quite old and am much discouraged over it because I have been taught that the good die young. What do you think?

A.—Perhaps you are dead but won't lie down.

Q.—What do you think of prohibition?

A.—!!! ??X) (—) (—$$$!'!

Q.—Is it tough to be blind?

A.—We can't answer the question until we know definitely whether the women are going to wear long skirts.

Q.—Has a woman a right to a man's pay envelope?

A.—Yes and some of 'em have a good left, too.

Q.—My husband is very flirtatious. Would you trust him?

A.—No, that's how you probably got him.

Q.—The people next door bought a talking machine and one record and they've played this almost continuously for a whole month. What can I do?

A.—Buy a saxophone and practice on it all day long. They'll compromise.

Q.—Do you believe in signs?

A.—Yes, when a wife finds a strand of blond hair on your coat and she's dark haired it's a sign you've got to find a plausible excuse darn quick.

GLIDING AROUND

By Dave Sentner

A GLIDING aviator prophesies that man will soon be able to sail anywhere in the air with only wind as motive power.

The fellow who has a little wind of his own will have it all over the ordinary pigeon. Think of the advantage a Congressman will have.

Doorways will only be good for museums and they'll bring the garbage in the back window. The ground will be so empty that they'll keep the stars on lampposts so they won't get nicked by the traffic upstairs.

Windows will be used for doors and people will have to stay dressed twenty-four hours because you'll never be able to tell what the wind will blow in.

The women will be wearing a different colored glider for every airy affair. Short gliders will be in season on calm days and long gliders on windy days and opticians will do a bird of a business.

It will be no use throwing your wife out the window because she'd only glide right back and have you arrested for obstructing traffic.

At first there would be danger from falling tip flasks dropped by the fly-by-night element.

Instead of society being divided into highbrow and lowbrow we'd have the high flyer and the low flyer. You'd never find a fat man among the aristocrats.

Medbury Says in Some Cafes Waiters Serve and Tip Themselves

By John P. Medbury

RESTAURANT prices are getting so high that a lot of people who live in hotels are now cooking in their rooms. The guests fool the manager by cooking corned beef and cabbage and burning incense at the same time.

THERE'S no danger in frying lamb chops if you give them an oriental aroma.

HE thinks the odor comes from Arabia. How is he going to tell that it originated in Chicago?

IT'S alright to make a butcher shop out of your suite providing you can make it smell like a temple.

THE only employe of the hotel who's in favor of you doing your own cooking is the house doctor.

THE guest's individual cooking is interfering with the hotel dining room. The only ones the hotel can bank on eating there are the waiters.

THEY serve their own meals and tip themselves.

ONE waiter left a dime under his plate and then called himself a cheap skate for leaving such a small tip.

THE thing the managers are so sore about is that they never get invited to the guest's room for dinner. They don't know whether it's neglect or kindness.

ONE manager said the guests ought to print a bill of fare and leave it with him. If the dining room ran out of roast beef and a customer wanted it he could give him the number of the suite where he could get some.

IT would be terrible to send a man to 1103 for roast beef and then find out that they were having baked halibut up there.

ONE guy said to the manager: "I like you personally, Mr. Harrison, but why did you send to 306 for hamburger when 202 was having chicken?"

SO the manager took him through the halls and let him sniff the different transoms until he found what he wanted.

MOST transoms are built above the doors and this is all right for a tall guy but a little fellow would starve to death.

HE either has to go hungry or work with some bird who has a big nose.

BUT a guy with a cold has to take his chance and knock at the different doors.

A LOT of transients sit in the lobby and watch the permanent guests come in with their groceries before they make up their mind where they're going to eat dinner.

BUT most of the guests are wise and they are now having their meat and vegetables wrapped up to look like flowers.

ONCE OVERS

(Copyright, 1922, by International Feature Service, Inc.)

ARE YOU ALWAYS GOING TO BE WHAT YOU ARE?

There are a lot of people in this world who are too easily satisfied.

To get right down to the personal, how about yourself?

You meet your expenses by holding your expenses down.

Many things you want, many things you would like to provide for your family, but you do not consider it would be worth the extra effort on your part which you would have to make to procure them.

You are satisfied that you have a job that you can keep as long as you can work, and you know just how much money is forthcoming and it is easier to manage not to spend it all than it is to manage a way to get more.

You can curb your wants, that is what you can do, and not need more.

But if you are satisfied thus you are always going to be what you are at present.

You need ambition, incentive to greater accomplishment.

You need a desire to improve, and a desire so strong that you can put your whole heart and soul in the realization of that desire.

Are you a mere bit of flotsam drifting hence?

Then bestir yourself while there is time.

This Day in History—December 4, 1922

THIS is the anniversary of the death, in 1791, of Wolfgang Mozart, the famous composer. He played in all European capitals. His one enduring opera is the "Magic Flute."

If This is Your Birthday

YOU are inclined to melancholy, no matter how buoyant your sense of humor, there is always to be found in it just that touch of audity which will make you feared rather than loved. Today is one of uncertain omen.

WHEN KNIGHTHOOD WAS IN FLOWER

See This Romance of Princess Mary Tudor Starring Marion Davies in Super Motion Pictures Which Are Now Showing at the Park Theatre

World-Famous Story of the All-Conquering Power of Love Over the Heart of the Wilful and Beautiful Sister of the Autocratic King Henry VIII.

By Charles Major

"DEVIL a doubt of that, and you will succeed, too, or my crown's a stew pan," and he laughed at the huge joke he was about to perpetrate on his poor, old royal brother.

It would seem that the tremendous dose of flattery administered by Mary would have been so plainly self-interested as to alarm the dullest perception, but Henry's vanity was so dense, and his appetite for flattery so great, that he accepted it all without suspicion, and it made him quite affable and gracious.

Mary kept up her show of affection and docile obedience for a week or two until she thought Henry's suspicions were allayed; and then, after having done enough petting and fondling, as she thought, to start the earth itself a-moving—as some men are foolish enough to say it really does—she began the attack direct by putting her arms about the king's neck, and piteously begging him not to sacrifice her whole life by sending her to France.

Her pathetic, soul-charged appeal might have softened the heart of Caligula himself; but Henry was not even cruel. He was simply an animal so absorbed in himself that he could not feel for others.

"Oh! it is out at last," he said, with a laugh. "I thought all this sweetness must have been for something. So the lady wants her Brandon, and doesn't want her Louis, yet is willing to obey her dear, kind brother? Well, we'll take her at her word and let her obey. You may as well understand, once and for all, that you are to go to France. You promised to go decently if I would not cut off that fellow's head, and now I tell you that if I hear another whimper from you off it comes, and you will go to France too."

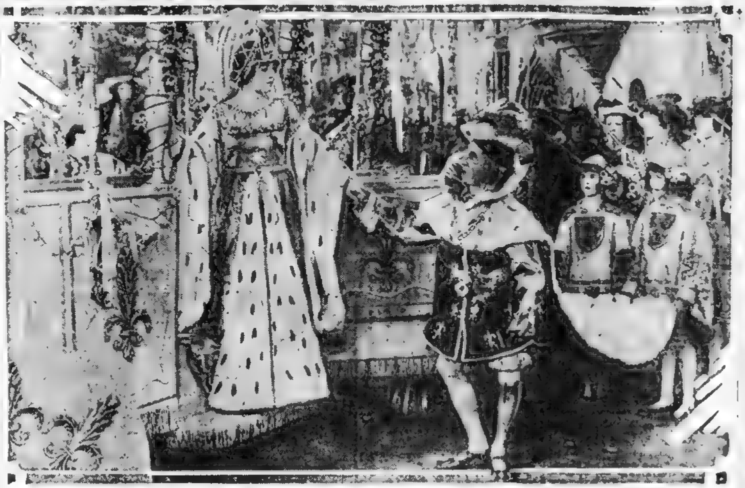
This brought Mary to terms quickly enough. It touched her one vulnerable spot—her love.

"I will go; I promise it again. You shall never hear another word of complaint from me if you give me your royal word that no harm shall come to him—to him," and she put her hands over her face to conceal her tears as she softly wept.

"The day you sail for France, Brandon shall go free and shall again have his old post at court. I like the fellow as a good companion, and really believe you are more to blame than he."

"I am all to blame, and am ready this day to pay the penalty. I am at your disposal to go when and where you choose," answered Mary, most pathetically.

Poor, fair Proserpina, with no kind mother Demeter to help her. The ground will soon open, and



Princess Mary becomes King Louis' queen

Pluto will have his bride.

That evening Cavenish took me aside and said his master, Wolsey, wished to speak to me privately at a convenient opportunity. So, when the bishop left his card-table, an hour later, I threw myself in his way. He spoke gayly to me, and we walked down the corridor arm in arm. I could not imagine what was wanted, but presently it came out: "My dear Caskoden"—had I been one for whom he could have had any use, I should have grown suspicious—"My dear Caskoden, I know I can trust you, especially when that which I have to say is for the happiness of your friends. I am sure you will never name me in connection with the suggestion I am about to make, and will use the thought only as your own."

I did not know what was coming, but gave him the strongest assurance of my trustworthiness.

"It is this: Louis of France is little better than a dead man. King Henry, perhaps, is not fully aware of this, and if he is, he has never considered the probability of his speedy death. The thought occurred to me that although the princess cannot dissuade her brother from this marriage, she may be able, in view of her ready and cheerful compliance, to extract some of her virtue out of her sore necessity, and to induce him to promise that, in case of the death of Louis, she herself shall choose her second husband."

"My lord," I replied, quickly grasping the point, "it is small wonder you rule this world. You have both brain and heart."

"I thank you, Sir Edwin, and hope that both may always be at the service of you and your friends."

I gave the suggestion to Mary as my own, recommending that she proffer her request to the king in the presence of Wolsey, and, although she had little faith or hope, she determined to try.

Within a day or two an opportunity offered, and she said to Henry: "I am ready to go to France any time you wish, and shall go decently and willingly; but if I do so much for you, brother, you might at least promise me that when King Louis is dead I may marry whomsoever I wish. He will probably live forever, but let me have at least that hope to give me what cheer it may while I suffer."

The ever-present Wolsey, who was standing near and heard Mary's petition, interposed: "Let me add my prayer to that of her highness. We must give her her own way in something."

Mary was such a complete picture of wretchedness that I thought at the time she had really found a tender spot in Henry's heart, for he gave the promise. Since then I have learned in a way, shortly, that it was given simply to pacify the girl, and without any intention whatever of its being kept, but that in case of the death of King Louis, Henry intended again to use his sister to his own advantage.

WHEN A GIRL MARRIES

By Ann Lisle

PARK was in fine fettle. He kept up a running fire of banter all the way to Miss May's home. But Ralph Lacy sat strangely quiet and reserved beyond anything I had ever known him to be. And I found myself caught between his almost austere dignity and Park's gayety so that I couldn't find a mood which fully expressed me.

PARK WAS IN FINE FETTLE. HE KEPT UP A RUNNING FIRE OF BANTER

"I'll go in and get Aunt May," said Mr. Lacy with an almost explosive force as the car drew up at the curb before the apartment where she had taken a tiny room and bath shortly after I took her into partnership.

"All right," agreed Park easily. "It's not such a bum job you've left me. I can think of worse things than five minutes' tete-a-tete with Mrs. Anna Harrison."

We were still giggling like two happy children over what followed that when the door of the car was flung back by the footman. Park leaped out, and in another moment he was handing in the sweetest little moss rose of a person imaginable. Miss May was wearing a cape of soft silver green brocade shot with pink and collared in fluffy silver marabout and in it she was perfect.

"Isn't she the loveliest thing in the world?" asked Park.

"She's a fairy queen—Titania," I said heartily, with my heart full of joy, because she was indeed charming. "It's going to be Miss May's evening—and she's lovely enough to match her face right this blessed minute."

Lightly Miss May's hand slid over mine for a second.

"Would you call me—Aunt May too," she said. "And will you let an old woman whisper a question; or no, I'll say it aloud. Didn't you wear that stunning street-coat because I never mentioned that I'd bought an evening wrap? Didn't you do it to give me the centre of the stage? Didn't you fear I hadn't a coat to go with your prettiest?"

"Yes," I gasped, astonished at her acumen, too amazed to protest.

"Then if it's my party—I vote we stop and let you call for the wonderful black and gold brocade cape I glimpsed on you one night when you and Mr. Neal and Miss Phoebe were at theatre together."

"You darling!" I cried. "Isn't she—cunning?"

"I'd say there were two darlings in this car, wouldn't you, Ralph?" asked Park with a choke in his voice. "I didn't know women could be so gallant to each other, did you? Each wanted the other to have all the admiration and glory."

"I didn't know an evening could start so—gloriously," said Ralph Lacy in a low tone that was almost reverent. "I hope the rest of it keeps up to the finest bit of character I've ever seen displayed by daughters of Eve."

Something in the tenseness of his voice made me vaguely uncomfortable. Perhaps Miss May sensed this and was looking for a way out when she cried:

"Of course it's going to keep getting better and better. Haven't we something to look forward to yet—meeting Max Hoadley?"

I actually thought there was a note of eagerness in her voice. Was it at the thought of Max Hoadley—or did the sudden sliding of her hand over mine mean that she meant to stand between me and something undeclared but [illegible] the exotic air of the luxurious car.

"Here we are, children!" cried Park as the car drew up before a restaurant, whose air of imposing magnificence made me thankful that Miss May had insisted on my stopping off for the right sort of evening coat.

"Welcome to the party!" carolled Park again as if to make up for Mr. Lacy's peculiar silence ever since his own exclamation that it looked like a glorious evening and that he'd never seen daughters of Eve show finer consideration for each other.

With great gallantry [illegible] handed first Miss May and then me to the sidewalk and in through the wide doorway of the most exclusive restaurant in town. And there, waiting for us in the hall, were Max Hoadley and Mr. Rockhill.

The younger man was perfectly groomed in the "latest thing" as a theatre program might have recommended it. But strangely enough Max Hoadley's rather squat, broad figure had an authority more nearly in keeping with Park's wonderful distinction and Mr. Lacy's undeniable look of "being somebody."

There was a chorus of good evenings, and then Miss May and I were permitted to disappear into the dressing room for the prinking women are supposed to require even though they've spent hours doing it at home.

"Do we keep on our coats?" she asked in a flutter of excitement, which sent flags of soft color flying high in her cheeks.

"If you look any more adorable out of that lovely coat than in it, we don't!" I laughed.

THE TRUTHFUL SEX

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

FOR centuries woman was held in subjection by man. And the heritage of those ages [illegible] love of power [illegible] for [illegible] and even a [illegible] the truth. The slave is afraid to confess to things which the free man can boldly do. The slave fears punishment and cringes away from the anger of his master.

So woman for ages learned to protect herself by [illegible] from her master. I preface a [illegible] with this word of explanation. Here is what Myron B. has to say on the subject:

"I've just broken my engagement to a girl I would have loved and cherished all my life if she had been capable of telling the truth. And now most of my men friends tell me things which make me see that the girl is no different from the rest of her sex. Women will not be on the level with men."

First of all, I deny the allegation, Myron B. Women are not "natural born liars." Even if statistics were to bear out the oft-proclaimed masculine contention that men are more truthful than women, there is a definite psychological and biological reason why women should take refuge behind deceit.

Given their greater physical prowess, and with political and social power in their own hands, men have ruled the world [illegible] And women had [illegible] whose only weapon [illegible] of a sex which had [illegible] And to the woman [illegible] can be [illegible] straightforward. Hence [illegible] habit of embroidering [illegible] or bending it to suit the occasion.

[illegible] a world where [illegible] and work [illegible] women are learning to be honest with themselves and life, and the girl who lies and evades is as unpopular with her own sex as with men.

You Can't Brush Or Wash Out Dandruff
"Use Liquid Arvon"

The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

Do this tonight, and by morning most, if not all, of your dandruff will be gone and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop at once, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store and it never fails to do the work.

USE IT FOR SANITARY REASONS

DON'T take chances with your children's welfare. Make them safe and secure against vermin. KIL-VE is a clean and harmless, non oily, non-sticky preparation, that destroys, not only vermin, but eggs, nits or larvae and their breeding place. It doesn't interfere with growth or color of the hair, and NO FINE COMB NEEDED thereafter. Sold at all drug stores—35c, 65c and $1.25.

Loosen Up That Cold With Musterole

Have Musterole handy when a cold starts. It has all of the advantages of grandmother's mustard plaster WITHOUT the blister. You just apply it with the fingers. First you feel a warm tingle as the healing ointment penetrates the pores, then comes a soothing, cooling sensation and quick relief.

Made of pure oil of mustard and other simple ingredients, Musterole is recommended by many nurses and doctors. Try Musterole for bronchitis, sore throat, stiff neck, pleurisy, rheumatism, lumbago, croup, asthma, neuralgia, congestion, pains and aches of the back or joints, sore muscles, sprains, bruises, chilblains, frosted feet, colds of the chest. It may prevent pneumonia and "flu." 35c and 65c, jars and tubes.

The Best Cough Syrup is Home-made

Here's an easy way to save $2, and yet have the best cough remedy you ever tried.

You've probably heard of this home-made cough syrup. But have you ever used it? Thousands of families feel that they could hardly keep house without it. It's simple and cheap, but the way it takes hold of a cough will soon earn it a permanent place in your home.

Into a pint bottle, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex; then add plain granulated sugar syrup to fill up the pint. Or, use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. It tastes good, never spoils, and gives you a full pint of better cough remedy than you could buy ready-made for three times its cost.

It is really wonderful how quickly this home-made remedy conquers a cough—usually in 24 hours or less. It seems to penetrate through every air passage, loosens a dry, hoarse or tight cough, lifts the phlegm, heals the membranes, and gives almost immediate relief. Splendid for throat tickle, hoarseness, croup, bronchitis and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway pine extract, and has been used for generations for throat and chest ailments.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

KIMONO, By JOHN PARIS

Great Exposure of How Japanese —Treat Their Women—

SUPPRESSED BY JAPANESE GOVERNMENT

This startling and intensely interesting story of the Cherry Blossom Kingdom, telling what the Japanese think of women, was suppressed by the Japanese government. The expose has stunned Europe and opened the eyes of the world to what has really been going on. John Paris, the author, was an English diplomat there for years.

THE CHARACTERS IN THE STORY:

THE HONORABLE GEOFFREY BARRINGTON, son of Lord Brandan, a Captain in the British Army, resigns his commission when he weds

ASAKO FUJINAMI, heiress, daughter of Japanese parents who are dead; brought up and educated in French convent schools and introduced to London society by

LADY EVERINGTON, a brilliant matchmaker, who did not foresee the result of the bringing together of the two. At the reception toasts are drunk to the closer union of Britain and Japan, but both British and Japanese diplomats in the distinguished company evade the suggestion that the couple visit Japan, as appears to be their desire. Some of the reception guests frankly question the wisdom of the marriage and doubt the possibility of a happy life for the pair. Lady Everington, in her anxiety for the young Captain, who has been her special protege, interviews

COUNT SAITO, the Japanese Ambassador, who tells her the Fujinamis belong to the nouveaux riches of Japan, but gives little information of their origin or the source of their wealth. A visit to his wife's guardians, the Muratas, a Japanese family living in Paris, and a sojourn among the cosmopolitans of Deauville, sharpen the desire to see Japan. Aboard the ship they meet

VISCOUNT KAMIMURA, returning home to wed a bride he has never seen. A stop at Nagasaki is the first sight of Japan. A part of the revelation is the Chonkina, or Geisha dance, seen by Barrington, who is shocked by the performance. He is disturbed to learn from the talk of Americans and Englishmen that marriages with Japanese women are not favorably regarded.

TANAKA, a nondescript Japanese, attaches himself to Barrington and accompanies him to Tokyo, where Geoffrey meets

REGGIE FORSYTH, attache to the British embassy, musical and romantic, who has just been transferred from Paris.

YAE SMITH, daughter of a Japanese mother and an English father, languishes around Reggie's apartment, where Barrington meets her.

SA ITO, lawyer for the Fujinami estate, arranges for the Barringtons to meet the bride's family. Barrington is not impressed. A family conference discloses that the Fujinami income is derived from the Geisha house privileges in Tokyo and elsewhere. It is decided that Asako should be divorced and married to a Japanese.

ASAKO, Barrington's bride, begins to learn something of Japanese family relations and hear about her father and mother, the one a poet and the other a delicate, clinging little woman, who died when Asako was born.

"IF Asako is barren, then a son must be adopted," said the old gentleman.

"To adopt twice in succession is unlucky," objected Mr. Fujinami Gentaro.

"Then," said Mrs. Shidzuye, "the old woman of Akabo shall come for consultation. She shall tell if possible for her to have babies.

Akabo was the up-country village, whence the first Fujinama had come to Tokyo to seek his fortune. The Japanese never completely loses touch with his ancestral village; and for over a hundred years the Tokyo Fujinami had paid their annual visit to the mountains of the North to render tribute to the graves of their forefathers. They still preserved an inherited faith in the "wise woman" of the district, who from time to time was summoned to the capital to give her advice. Their other medical counsellor was Professor Kashio, who held degrees from Munich and Vienna.

During the first days of her self-chosen widowhood Asako was little better than a convalescent. She had never looked at sorrow before; and the shock of what she had seen had paralyzed her vitality without as yet opening her understanding. Like a dog, who in the midst of his faithful affection has been struck for a fault of which he is unconscious, she took refuge in darkness, solitude and despair.

The Japanese, who are as a rule intuitively aware of others' emotions, recognized her case. A room was prepared for her in a distant wing of the straggling house, a "foreign-style" room in an upper story with glass in the windows—stained glass too—with white muslin blinds, a colored lithograph of Napoleon and a real bed, recently purchased on Sadako's pleading that everything must be done to make life happy for their guest.

"But she is a Japanese," Mr. Fujinami Gentaro had objected. "It is not right that a Japanese should sleep upon a tall bed. She must learn to give up luxurious ways."

Sadako protested that her cousin's health was not yet assured; and so discipline was relaxed for a time.

Asako spent most of her days in the tall bed, gazing through the open doorway, across the polished wood veranda like the toffee veranda of a confectioner's model, past the wandering branch of an old twisted pine tree which crouched by the side of the mansion like a faithful beast, over the pigmy landscape of the garden, to the scale-like roofs of the distant city, and to the pagoda on the opposite hill.

It rested her to lie thus and look at her country. From time to time Sadako would steal into the room. Her cousin would leave the invalid in silence, but she always smiled; and she would bring some offering with her, a dish of food—Asako's favorite dishes, of which Tanaka had already compiled a complete list—or sometimes a flower. At the open door she would pause to shuffle off her pale blue zori (sandals); and she would glide across the clean rice-straw matting shod in her snow-white tabi only.

Asako gradually accustomed herself to the noises of the house. First, there was the clattering of the amado, the wooden shutters, whose removal announced the beginning of the day, then the gurgling and the expectorations which accompanied the family ablutions, then the harsh sound of the men's voices and their rattling laughter, the sound of their geta on the gravel paths of the garden, like the tedious dropping of heavy rain on an iron roof, then the flickering and dusting of the maids as they went about their daily soji (house-cleaning), the shrill mouse-like chirps and their silly giggle; then the afternoon stillness when every one was absent or sleeping; and then, the revival of life and bustle at about six o'clock, when the clogs were shuffled off at the front door, when the teacups began to jingle and when sounds of swishing water came up from the bath-house, the crackle of the wood fire under the bath-tub, the smell of burning logs and the distant odors of the kitchen.

Big Black Crow

Outside the twilight was beginning to gather. A big black crow flopped lazily on to the branch of the nieghboring pine tree. His harsh croak disturbed Asako's mind like a threat. High overhead passed a flight of wild geese in military formation on their way to the continent of Asia. Lights began to peep among the trees. Behind the squat pagoda a sky of raspberry pink closed the background.

The twilight is brief in Japan. The night is velvety; and the moonlight and the starlight transfigure the dolls' house architecture, the warped pine trees, the feathery bamboo clumps and the pagoda spires.

From a downstair room there came the twang of cousin Sadako's koto, a kind of zither instrument, upon which she played interminable melancholy sonatas of liquid, detached notes, like desultory thoughts against a background of silence. There was no accompaniment to this music and no song to chime with it; for, as the Japanese say, the accompaniment for koto music is the Summer night-time and its heavy fragrance, and the voice with which it harmonizes is the whisper of the breeze in the pine branches.

Long after Sadako had finished her practice came borne upon the distance the still more melancholy pipe of a student's flute. This was the last human sound. After that the night was left to the orchestra of the insects—the grasshoppers, the crickets and the semi (cicadas). Asako soon was able to distinguish at least ten or twelve different songs, all metallic in character, like clock springs being slowly wound up and then let down with a run. The night and the house vibrated with these infinitesimal chromatics. Sometimes Asako thought the creatures must have got into her room, and feared for entanglements in her hair. Then she remembered that her mother's nickname had been "the Semi," and that she had been so called because she was always happy and singing in her little house by the river.

Asako Aroused

This memory aroused Asako one day with a wish to see how her own house was progressing. This wish was the first positive thought which had stirred her mind since her husband had left her; and it marked a stage in her convalescence.

"If the house is ready," she thought, "I will go there soon. The Fujinamis will not want me to live here permanently."

This showed how little she understood as yet the Japanese family system, whereby relatives remain as permanent guests for years on end.

"Tanaka," she said one morning, in what was almost her old manner, "I think I will have the motor car today."

Tanaka had become her body servant as in the old days. At first she had resented the man's reappearance, which awakened such cruel memories. She had protested against him to Sadako, who had smiled and promised. But Tanaka continued his ministrations; and Asako had not the strength to go on protesting. As a matter of fact, he was specially employed by Mr. Fujinami Gentaro, to spy on Asako's movements, an easy task hitherto, as she had not moved from her room.

"Where is the motor car, Tanaka?" she asked again.

He grinned, as Japanese always do when embarrassed.

"Very sorry for you," he answered; 'motor car has gone away."

"Has Captain Barrington——?" Asako began instinctively; then, remembering that Geoffrey was now many thousand miles away from Japan, she turned her face to the wall and began to cry.

"Young Fujinami San," said Tanaka, "has taken motor car. He go away to mountains with geisha girl. Very bad, young Fujinami, very roue."

Asako thought that it was rather impertinent to borrow her own motor car without asking permission, even if she was their guest. She did not yet understand that she and all her possessions belonged from henceforth to her family—to her male relatives, that is to say; for she was only a woman.

Interested At Last

"Old Fujinami San," Tanaka went on, happy to find his mistress, to whom he was attached in a queer Japanese sort of a way, interested and responsive at last, "old Mr. Fujinami, he also go to mountain with geisha girl, but different mountain. Japanese people all very roue. All Japanese people like to go away in Summer season with geisha girl. Very bad custom. Old Mr. Fujinami San, not so very bad? keep same geisha girl very long time. Perhaps Ladyship see one little girl, come sometimes with Miss Sadako and bring meal-time things. That little girl is geisha girl's daughter. Perhaps old Mr. Fujinami San's daughter also, I think; very bastard; I don't know."

So he rambled on in the fashion of servants all the world over, until Asako knew all the ramifications of her relatives, legitimate and illegitimate.

She gathered that the men had all left Tokio during the hot season, and that only the women were left in the house. This encouraged her to descend from her eyrie, and to endeavor to take up her position in her family, which was beginning to appear the less reassuring the more she learned about its history.

The life of a Japanese lady of quality is peculiarly tedious. She is relieved from the domestic cares which give occupation to her humble sisters. But she is not treated as an equal or as a companion by her menfolk, who are taught that marriage is for business and not for pleasure, and consequently that home-life is a bore. She is supposed to find her own amusements, such as flower arrangement, tea-ceremony, music, kimono-making and the composition of poetry. More often, this refined and innocent ideal degenerates into a poor trickle of an existence, enlivened only by scrappy magazine reading, servants' gossip, empty chatter about clothes, neighbors and children, backbiting, envying and malice.

Red Cross Show

Once Sadako took her cousin to a charity entertainment given for the Red Cross at the house of a rich nobleman. A hundred or more ladies were present; but stiff civility prevailed. None of the guests seemed to know each other. There was no friendly talking. There were no men guests. There was three hours' agony of squatting, a careful adjustment of expensive kimonos, weak tea and tasteless cakes, a blank staring at a dull conjuring performance, and deadly silence.

"Do you ever have dances?" Asako asked her cousin.

"The geisha dance, because they are paid," said Sadako primly. Her pose was no longer cordial and sympathetic. She set herself up as a mentor to this young savage, who did not know the usages of civilised society.

"No, not like that," said the girl from England; "but dancing among yourselves with your men friends."

"Oh, no, that would not be nice at all. Only tipsy persons would dance like that.'

Asako tried, not very successfully, to chat in easy Japanese with her cousin; but she fled from the interminable talking parties of her relatives, where she could not understand one word, except the innumerable parenthesis — naruhodo (indeed!) and so des'ka (is it so?)—with which the conversation was studded. As the realization of her solitude made her nerves more jumpy, she began to imagine that the women were forever talking about her, criticizing her unfavorably and disposing of her future.

The only man whom she saw during the hot Summer months, besides the inevitable Tanaka, was Mr. Ito, the lawyer. He could talk good English. He was not so egotistical and bitter as Sadako. He had traveled in America and Europe. He seemed to understand the trouble of Asako's mind, and would offer sympathetic advice.

Must Be Patient

"It is difficult to go to school when we are no longer children," he would say sententiosly. "Asa San must be patient. Asa San must forget. Asa San must take Japanese husband. I think it is the only way."

"Oh, no," the poor girl shivered; "I wouldn't marry again for anything."

"But," Ito went on relentlessly, "it is hurtful to the body when once it has custom to be married. I think that is reason why so many widow women are unfortunate and become mad."

Every day he would spend an hour or so in conversation with Asako. She thought that this was a sign of friendliness and sympathy. As a matter of fact, his object at first was to improve his English. Later on more ambitious projects developed in his fertile brain.

He would talk about New York and London in his queer stilted way. He had been a fireman on board ship, a teacher of jiujitsu, a jugler, a quack dentist, Heaven knows what else. Driven by the conscientious inquisitiveness of his race, he had endured hardships, contempt and rough treatment with the smiling patience inculcated in the Japanese people by their education. "We must chew our gall, and bide our time," they say, when the too powerful foreigner insults or abuses them.

He had seen the magnificence of our cities, the vastness of our undertakings and had returned to Japan with great relief to find that life among his own people was less strenuous and fierce, that less was left to individual courage and enterprise, that things happened more often than things were done. The impersonality of Japan was as restful to him as it is aggravating to a European.

But it must not be imagined that Ito was an idle man. On the contrary, he was exceedingly hard-working and ambitious. His dream was to become a statesman, enjoy unlimited patronage, to make men and to break men and to die a peer. When he returned to Japan from his wanderings with exactly two shillings in his pocket, this was his program. Like Cecil Rhodes, his hero—among white men, he made a will distributing millions.

Rich Cousins

Then he attached himself to his rich cousins, the Fujinami; and very soon became indispensable to them. Fujinami Gentaro, an indolent man, gave him more and more authority over the family fortune. It was dirty business, this buying of girls and hiring of pimps, but it was immensely profitable; and more and more of the profits found their way into Ito's private account. Fujinami did not seem to care. Takeshi, the son and heir, was a nonentity. Ito's intention was to continue to serve his cousins until he had amassed a working capital of a hundred thousand pounds. Then he would go into politics.

But the advent of Asako suggested a short cut to his hopes. If he married her he would gain immediate control of a large interest in the Fujinami estate. Besides, she had all the qualifications for the wife of a Cabinet Minister, knowledge of foreign languages, ease in foreign society, experience of foreign dress and customs. Moreover, passion was stirring in his heart, the swift, stormy passion of the Japanese male, which, when thwarted, drives him toward murder and suicide.

Like many Japanese, he had felt the attractiveness of foreign women when he was traveling abroad. Their independence stimulated him, their savagery and their masterful ways. Ito had found in Asako the physical beauty of his own race together with the character and energy which had pleased him so much in white women. Everything seemed to favor his suit. Asako clearly seemed to prefer his company to that of other members of the family. He had a hold over Fujinami which would compel them to assent to anything he might require. True, he had a wife already, but she could easily be divorced.

Tolerated Him

Asako tolerated him, faute de mieux. Cousin Sadako was becoming tired of their system of mutual instruction, as she tired sooner or later of everything.

She had developed a romantic interest in one of the pet students whom the Fujinami kept as an advertisement and a bodyguard. He was a pale youth with long greasy hair, spectacles and more gold in his teeth that he had ever placed in his waist-band. Propriety forbade any actual conversation with Sadako; but there was an interchange of letters almost every day, long subjective letters, describing states of mind and high ideals, punctuated with shadowy Japanese poems and with quotations from the Bible, Tolstoy, Nietzsche, Bergson, Eucken, Oscar Wilde and Samuel Smiles.

Sadako told her cousin that the young man was a genius and would one day be professor of literature at the Imperial University.

CHAPTER XXIII

The Real Shinto.

To no naka, wo
Nani ni tatoyemu?
Asa-borake
Kogi-yuku fune no
Ato no shira-nami.

To what shall I compare
This world?
To the white wake behind
A ship that has rowed away
At dawn!

When the Autumn came and the maple trees turned scarlet, the men returned from their long Summer holidays. After that Asako's lot became heavier than ever.

"What is this talk of tall beds and special cooking?" said Mr. Fujinami Gentaro. "The girl is a Japanese. She must live like a Japanese and be proud of it."

So Asako had to sleep on the floor alongside her cousin Sadako in one of the downstairs rooms. Her last possession, her privacy, was taken away from her. The soft mattresses which formed the native bed, were not uncomfortable; but Asako discarded at once the wooden pillow, which every Japanese woman fits into the nape of her neck, so as to prevent her elaborate coiffure becoming disarranged. As a result, her head was always untidy, a fact upon which her relatives commented.

"She does not look like a great foreign lady now," said Mrs. Shidzuye, the mistress of the house. "She looks like osandon (a rough kitchen maid) from a country inn."

The other women tittered.

One day the old woman of Akabo arrived. Her hair was quite white like spun glass, and her waxen face was wrinkled like a relief map. Her body was bent double like a lobster, and her eyes were dim with cataracts. Cousin Sadako said with awe that she was over a hundred years old.

Had To Submit

Asako had to submit to the indignity of allowing this desiccated hag to pass her fumbling hands all over her body, pinching her and prodding her. The old woman smelt horribly of daikon (pickled horse-radish). Furthermore the terrified girl had to answer a battery of questions as to her personal habits and her former marital relations. In return, she learned a number of curious facts about herself, of which she had hitherto no inkling. The lucky coincidence of having been born in the hour of the Bird and the day of the Bird set her apart from the rest of womankind as an exceptionally fortunate individual. But, unhappily, the malignant influence of the Dog Year was against her nativity.

When once this disaffected animal had been conquered and cast out, Asako's future should be a very bright one. The family witch agreed with the Fujinami that the Dog had in all probability departed with the foreign husband. Then the toothless crone breathed three times upon the mouth, breasts and thighs of Asako; and when this operation was concluded, she stated her opinion that there was no reason, obstetrical or esoteric, why the ransomed daughter of the house of Fujinami should not become the mother of many children.

But on the psychical condition of the family in general she was far from reassuring. Everything about the mansion, the growth of the garden, the flight of the birds, the noises of the night-time, foreboded dire disaster in the near future. The Fujinami were in the grip of a most alarming inge (chain of cause and effect). Several "rough ghosts" were abroad; and were almost certain to do damage before their wrath could be appeased. What was the remedy? It was indeed difficult to prescribe for such complicated cases. Temple charms, however, were always efficacious. The old woman gave the names of some of the shrines which specialized in exorcism.

FORBES' VIEWS ON FINANCE

——By B. C. Forbes——

Many business men and many friends of business men are on the wrong track.

Pessimism is so unpopular and optimism so popular in this wonderful land that business leaders and others feel that the best thing to do is to paint ultra bright pictures of the present business position and of the future.

This is an unwise course to follow at this time.

* * *

You must have noticed that almost every time you pick up a newspaper or a business periodical dazzlingly optimistic headlines meet your eye. Schwab is reported as predicting the biggest business ever; President Mitchell of the largest bank in America returns from Europe with a cheerful description of conditions there; the Federal Reserve Board gives a glowing account of the boomy conditions throughout our own country; the White House, the Department of Commerce and other Washington institutions and departments all indulge in enthusiastic superlatives over the lovely state of business affairs.

* * *

With what result?

* * *

Why, the farmers have become convinced that it is time for them to receive a more generous share of the wonderful business bountifulness they read so much about, and they, accordingly, demand prompt and sweeping reduction of railroad rates, the setting aside of uncounted millions of money for them at cheap rates, and other action calculated to help agriculture and hurt business.

Many Washington politicians reason that, since business is booming so tremendously and is now as strong as the rock of Gibraltar, no harm will be done if heavily increased taxes are levied upon surpluses and profits and other tax measures conjured up to compel "capital" to pay a heavier share of the national burden.

Then depend upon it that before long labor leaders are going to demand that the workers receive better participation in all this delightful prosperity they are constantly hearing and reading about.

Consumers of many varieties of merchandise are going to raise a serious howl when they are told they must pay increased prices, for they will protest that, since everything has been going along so swimmingly, there is no excuse for corporations and other suppliers of goods tagging on something more to the price, and the tendency will be to incite another "buyers strike."

* * *

If I could feel for one moment that the business position were absolutely impregnable, capable of withstanding any and every conceivable assault, then I would say let the agrarian interests dictate slashing reductions in railway rates; let the farmers' block pass whatever drastic legislation it has in mind to; let Congress impose all sorts of additional tax burdens on the business world, and let currency and credit be manipulated any old way.

* * *

But, as I have already stated in these articles, I do not believe that the business situation and the business outlook are fool-proof.

* * *

Frankly, I feel that the most circumspect action all around is called for, if the quite remarkable improvement which has developed during recent months is not to be arrested.

In other words, I am trying to look ahead, and, looking ahead, I cannot but feel that we are moving toward dangers which may or may not be avoided.

* * *

The surest way not to avoid them is for every one in the financial and business world to become grandiloquently and blindly optimistic.

MARKET ABOVE DAY'S LOW IN FINAL HOUR

Prices weakened over a broad list in New York after stocks had made a good start. Money renewed at 5 per cent. The market was above the day's low in the final hour.

U. S. Steel was off more than a point. California Pete was up over 4 points. Endicott-Johnson sold off 3 points on disappointment over failure to declare extra cash dividend, then rallied.

The hasty elimination of a substantial part of the outstanding short interest on the recent advance left the market in a vulnerable position for further attacks, and prices continued to give way in the early afternoon.

Fisher Body was depressed 7 points, Gulf States Steel 3½, Sears Roebuck and Standard Oil of California 3¼, and Northern Pacific, Great Northern preferred, Consolidated Gas, Famous Players, Coca Cola, Republic Steel, Standard Oil of New Jersey, People's Gas, U. S. Rubber and American Car 2 to 2½.

Union Tank Car jumped 12 points, to 132, a new high figure for the year, on expectation of a large extra dividend.

Electric Storage Battery was at a new 1922 high.

Prices Mostly Steady in Boston Transactions

Prices were mostly steady in transactions on the Boston Stock Exchange. Point or more gains were made by Boston & Maine Classes B and C, Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway preferred and Pacific Mills.

Edison was off more than a point, while Edison rights dipped to 3¼, their low since listing.

Fractional gains came in Calumet & Arizona, Copper Range, Mississippi Power, New Cornelia, Gray & Davis, and Anaconda.

LOAN STATEMENT PLAN GIVEN UP

The committee on business conduct of the New York Stock Exchange has notified the members that the weekly statement of the amount of their brokerage loans outstanding no longer would be required.

During the war a committee of bankers, acting for the Federal Reserve Bank, asked for such statistics in order to provide means whereby brokerage houses could obtain sufficient funds to carry on their business at a low interest rate without competition from the government, which was then carrying on its Liberty Loan campaign.

It is explained that the need for such reports has disappeared.

BUTTERICK COMPANY.

To O. D. B., Milton—Butterick Company is the capital stock of fashion publishing concern. Speculative, inactive issue. Rather closely held. Management satisfactory. Financial position fair. Outstanding 146,421 shares, $100 par value, junior to $766,000 mortgages; $800,000 Butterick Publishing preferred. Asset value $25.50 a share, good will excluded. Current assets $4,220,075, including $373,000 cash, $2,088,000 accounts receivable, $1,787,000 inventory. Current liabilities $1,405,495, including $450,000 notes payable, $88,000 taxes, $851,000 accounts payable. Net working capital $2,814,580. Surplus $2,998,817. Reserve $179,021. Dividend, none. Business improved.

PLYMOUTH CORDAGE.

To L. A., Leverett st.—At the annual meeting of Plymouth Cordage Company stockholders, President Loring stated that sales for the year ended July 31, 1922, amounted to $11,500,000, compared with $15,500,000 in the preceding fiscal period and $23,400,000 in the year ended July 31, 1920. The reduction in gross was due to the sharp decrease in average prices of rope and twine, although a larger tonnage of products was moved.

Mr. Loring spoke of the disadvantages under which foreign buyers of sisal were operating in Yucatan. The government has exempted native manufacturing companies from taxes and so-called "independents" will have to bear the brunt of government levies.

Surplus stocks of twine and rope have been greatly reduced during the last few months and the trade is now on a more healthy basis.

Cash position of Plymouth Cordage has improved since compilation of the annual figures.

KENNECOTT TO ACT SOON ON DIVIDEND

Kennecott Copper directors this week will discuss question of dividend resumption. Expected a 50-cent quarterly rate will be declared, although in some quarters a 75-cent declaration is forecast. Last dividends paid were in 1920, at rate of $2 annually.

With dividends to be declared this month by Utah Copper and Mother Lode Coalition, Kennecott should receive from its investment of 39 per cent. of the former and 50 per cent. of the latter a total of $2,500,000, against semi-annual requirement of $2,787,212 to maintain a $2 annual rate on Kennecott shares. This takes no account of earnings from production of low-cost copper at its Alaskan properties or from its South American subsidiary, Braden, which is now operating at a profit.

Standard Oil Pipe Line Co's

In the recent activities and big profit making eras for the majority of re-capitalized and extra stock distributed companies of the Standard Oil group, the pipe line subsidiaries were relegated.

Their enormous earnings and huge surpluses are now sufficiently assertive as to command marked attention by the investor.

Our special review, just prepared, succinctly points out the extraordinary merits of these companies.

TRAVEL BRIEFS
NATIONAL AND INTERNATIONAL

The numerous requests received at the local office of the Seaboard Air Line Railway for space in the through sleeping car which will be operated from Boston to St. Petersburg, Fla., and intermediate Florida points, beginning January 1, indicates that this new service fills a long felt want. Remarkable increases in the number of New England residents who spend the Winter in Florida have been registered for several years. This year, judging from the number and type of inquiries being received by John A. Blaser, New England passenger agent of the Seaboard Line, more New Englanders than ever before will seek to avoid the rigors of the New England Winter and enjoy the balmy sunshine of the Southern land.

EAVES AGENCY IN NEW QUARTERS.

The Eaves Steamship and Tourist Agency, for thirty years a Boston institution, has moved to new quarters in the Devonshire Building, at No. 33 Devonshire street, corner of State street, where the business will be continued under the direction of Henry L. Mulligan, who acquired the business four years ago. Mr. Mulligan, who has been nearly twenty-five years identified with the steamship business in Boston, is well known to the traveling public of this city and New England.

This agency serves as New England passenger agents for four prominent steamship lines in addition to representing all steamship lines to Europe, South America, West Indies and the Orient. The lines for which this organization acts as New England agents are: The French Line, the Lamport & Holt service, the Transatlantica Italiana, and the Lloyd Sabaudo. Clark Tours and Cruises are also served by Mr. Mulligan as general agent in New England. Formerly the agency was located on Congress street, near the corner of State street.

ATTEND TRAFFIC CLUBS MEETING.

Garrit Ford, vice president of the Boston & Maine road, and C. B. Baldwin, traffic manager of the United Shoe Machinery Corporation, will represent New England at the meeting of the Associated Traffic Clubs of America to be held in the Hotel Statler, St. Louis, on December 5 and 6.

NEW SERVICE TO CALIFORNIA.

Announcement is made by the local office of the Southern Pacific lines of the inauguration of tri-weekly standard Pullman sleeping car service between New Orleans and San Diego, Cal., via the Southern Pacific Sunset Route and the San Diego and Arizona Railway. This service will operate in the Sunset Limited trains between New Orleans and Niland, Cal., in connection with a new train between Niland and San Diego via El Centro. Westbound trains will leave New Orleans at 12:10 p. m. on Sunday, Tuesday and Friday, arriving in San Diego at 9:30 p. m. on the Tuesday, Thursday and Sunday following. Eastbound trains will leave San Diego at 8 a. m. on Sunday, Tuesday and Thursday, arriving in New Orleans at 7:35 p. m. on the following Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday.

This schedule provides a daylight ride through the famous Carriso Gorge and shortens the previous running time between New Orleans and San Diego by nine hours and fifty minutes. The schedule is also arranged to provide connection at New Orleans with the ships of the Morgan Line to and from New York. Because of this new service the running time of the Sunset Limited trains from New Orleans to Los Angeles is reduced one hour and forty minutes, and from New Orleans to San Francisco by two hours and thirty minutes.

EXCURSION FARES FOR 1922.

Advance announcement of Summer excursion fares to points in Utah, Colorado, Yellowstone National Park and Glacier National Park for the season of 1923 has just been received at the local office of the Chicago & North Western in the Old South Building. The Winter planning of Summer vacations has become a popular habit and the information that excursion fares will prevail during the coming vacation season will doubtless interest many persons.

DENVER TOURIST SECRETARY HERE.

Harry N. Burhans, executive secretary of the tourist and publicity bureau of the Denver (Colorado) Civic and Commercial Association, was in town during the past week, calling on tourist and transportation agents.

NOTHING FINER IN EUROPE.

The most remarkable and impressive panoramas in the world are to be seen in America, according to Everett Ritchie, assistant general passenger agent of the Colonial Line. For beauty and impressiveness, combined with maximum safety, nothing can exceed a boat trip through Long Island Sound to New York, declares Mr. Ritchie. As the Colonial Line boats wend their way up the East River, and pass under five noted bridges, Hell Gate, Queensboro, Williamsburg, Manhattan and Brooklyn, and by Blackwell's Island, Governor's Island, Battery Park, Old Castle Garden, the Statue of Liberty and dozens of the world's tallest buildings up to Pier 39, North River, the passengers obtain a view the like of which cannot be had anywhere else in the world and compared with which the finest sights of Europe appear drab and colorless. The fact that Long Island Sound is considered the best protected waterway in the world gives an assurance of safety that adds to the enjoyment of the trip. If the beauty and convenience of the boat trip were more generally realized by the public, declares Mr. Ritchie, it is doubtful if many times the existing facilities would prove sufficient to take care of the traffic.

NEW AGENT FOR LOCAL ILLINOIS CENTRAL OFFICE.

J. E. Whitney, formerly commercial agent for the Illinois Central at New York, has been appointed New England agent of the same road, effective December 1. The headquarters will be maintained at Room 738, Old South Building. J. B. Russell, who was the previous agent, has been transferred to Chicago. C. R. Phoenix, general Eastern agent of the Illinois Central at New York, was in the city during the week, installing Mr. Whitney in his new position.

TWO CARIBBEAN CRUISES.

Announcement is made of two Caribbean cruises to be conducted under the auspices of the Joseph M. Shea Tourist Company of the Old South Building, in connection with the United Fruit Company. These cruises will leave New York on the Great White Fleet steamship Carrillo on January 17 and February 14, 1923, and will include stops at Kingston, Jamaica; Cristobal, Canal Zone; Cartagena, Colombia; Puerto, Colombia, Colombia, and Santa Marta, Colombia. The total distance traveled will be 4,774 nautical miles and will require twenty-two days. As this ship was built especially for Caribbean cruise service, it possesses many features of accommodation and service not found on the average liner. Already a number of New Englanders have made reservations and it is expected that more than one hundred residents of this section will be aboard when the steamer leaves New York.

WEDDING A SURPRISE.

The announcement of the marriage of Florence E. Peterson, a popular stenographer in the Chicago & Northwestern Railway office in the Old South Building, to Douglas W. Fields, which was solemnized on November 24, was a surprise to her many friends in transportation circles as well as to her co-workers. Mr. and Mrs. Fields are enjoying their honeymoon in New York city.

BURLINGTON TO CONTINUE VACATION TICKET PLAN.

The low-cost round-trip Summer vacation tickets to Rocky Mountain National Parks and the Pacific Northwest via the Burlington Route, which proved so popular during the past Summer, will be available again next season, according to information just received by Alex Stocks, general agent, at the local offices of the Burlington in the Old South Building. These tickets will permit stop-overs at all points in either direction and will be good going via one route and returning via an entirely different way. These tickets probably will be placed on sale January 1 and carry a return limit of October 31. Improvements looking toward an even more comprehensive train service are being considered by the officials of the Burlington, in an effort to maintain the present popularity of this route for transcontinental travel.

REAL ESTATE HAPPENINGS

The Colchester, at No. 1470 Beacon street, Brookline, comprising twelve seven-room suites and 13,047 square feet of land, taxed on a valuation of $104,000, has been sold by Ethel M. Shaw, trustee, to Ellen M. Loring, who buys for investment.

As a part of this transaction, Caleb Loring, trustee, has conveyed to George Osgood the Pantooset Farm property at Hanover Four Corners. These sales were negotiated by the office of Walter Channing.

HUNTINGTON AVENUE SALE.

The brownstone building at No. 166 Huntington avenue, near West Newton street, containing four apartments and store, together with 3,202 square feet of land, has been sold by John Noble and Francis R. Boyd, trustees, to Herman H. Cievel of Brookline. The total assessed valuation is $37,700, of which $22,400 is on the land. Daniel J. Cronin of the Devonshire Building was the broker.

SOUTH END CORNER SOLD.

George E. Ashey has sold the modern brick building at No. 16-18 Clarendon street, at the corner of Warren avenue, to Milly Harris. The property contains two stores and three apartments. The valuation for tax purposes is $17,000, of which $5,600 is on the 1,256 square feet of land. James H. and Charles J. Brennan represented both parties in the transaction.

WHY WORRY

All nations have battled with Vermin galore.
They have ravaged the kingdom from shore to shore.
In palace of princes, at peasant's rude door
This curse of all ages need trouble no more.
In Waltham's fair city a cure has been found.
The housewives there say that no Vermin abound.
Martin's powder so handy they scatter around.
And so answer this question which ages propound.
MARTIN'S PEST POWDERS
Sold by all drug and department stores for 60c and $1.20; 65c and $1.30 by mail. Eleven different powders. Name kind when ordering. All registered in Maine.

Killing by State Suggests Killing to the Individual

As Long as All the People Set the Example of Killing, Deformed Minds Will Continue to Murder

Copyright, 1922, Star Co.

The Reverend T. T. Roberts of Bristol, England, made this statement:

> Out of 167 murderers consoled by me before their execution, 161 declared that they had been present at executions.

Think that over when told that "hanging discourages murder." When the State kills for any reason it sets the example in killing. The State thinks it kills for good reasons. So also thinks the criminal.

Once every government tortured witnesses, and thought it necessary—to prevent crime. WAS it necessary? Just as necessary as hanging. Oppose capital punishment. It degrades the State. It gives government sanction to killing.

To Buy Russian Bonds

And Make the People Pay? Hardly

Copyright, 1922, Star Co.

All the little people in France, good republicans loving liberty, also loving profitable investments, invested their money in the bonds of the Russian Czar.

It never occurred to them that their love of liberty would spread to Russia some day and that the Czar's bonds would be a pretty cheap investment.

Now the French government is trying to pay French-Russian bond owners one-half the value of their bonds, the payment to be made by the French government and the French banks on an even basis.

That will put another strain on French credit, on the French budget and the franc.

In this country there is a little tearful movement which would, if it could, arrange to have the United States government buy from their owners the Russian bonds foolishly bought by American bankers.

We have a government with a tender spot for high finance, but it isn't likely that we shall go quite as far as that.

Our government would not buy a lame horse that an honest farmer bought from a gypsy. There is no better reason for buying a lame bond that a foolish banker bought from the Czar.

A Rare War Hero

Burton K. Wheeler, elected to be United States Senator from the State of Montana, is a great, interesting man. He will be one of the youngest of our Senators and among the most progressive. He is a democratic Democrat, a man who believes in true democracy, a man who believes in the greatest good to the greatest number.

He has shown his mettle under the most trying circumstances when few stood the test. He was made United States District Attorney for the District of Montana during the war—in that part of the country where intolerance of opinion is much greater even than it is in the East. He refused to be the bludgeon by which every cowardly man, who had a personal grievance, sought to strike his enemy. He refused to use the power of his office against everyone concerning whom the jealous, envious, cowardly or corrupt brought a charge of pro-Germanism for the purpose of weakening the slandered man in the community.

His courage and firmness raised a storm and led to his resignation. Now, in four short years his vindication at the hands of his people has been complete and triumphant.

So has been the vindication of all those men who refused to become the victims of war hysteria, to add cowardice to mendacity and to throw away the Constitutional restraints and safeguards and make the greatest written code of liberty before the world a thing to laugh at just the time when it was most needed as a vital document. Our Constitution is gradually recovering.

Education in Boston

Dr. Payson Smith, State Commissioner on Education, tells us that, after careful study of the educational systems in the different great cities of the country, he is convinced that Boston has the best.

He applies the test in three ways, the quality and character of the teaching force, the number of students in comparison with the total population, and the number of what he terms minority groups to which education is brought. By minority groups he means the sub-normal children or those who do not keep up with the average progress for any reason and who are entirely overlooked in other great cities of the country.

This is good news from an interesting source. Dr. Smith cannot be accused of being either a particular friend of Boston or a particular friend of the Democratic party in Boston, or of being particularly anxious to make the rest of the people of the State believe that Boston is a paragon of virtue.

Therefore, it is interesting to see the judgment which an outsider, a gentleman who is probably a Republican in politics, has formed on the most important thing that any city does, the education of her children.

Execution of Childers

Mr. Robert Briscoe, the Irish-Jew soldier of the Irish Republican Army, who is seeking funds in the United States for those who are going hungry in Ireland, told a reporter of the Boston American the other day that in his opinion not a man in the firing squad which executed Childers was an Irishman. "They were all Englishmen of the Black-and-Tan variety, who are being employed by the Free Staters, even as the English had employed them before the establishment of the Free State."

He said that he did not believe that the Irish Free Staters would ever follow British methods and execute a man who had given up so much for Ireland as Childers had, but the defence of the execution by Cosgrave rather makes us feel that Mr. Briscoe is wrong. The more the pity.

Something to Think About

LOVE AND YOUTH

By Bruno Lessing

OVER the radio the other night I chanced to hear an actress discourse on the photo drama. One does not, as a rule, turn to actresses to learn the truths of life. Their function is to act, not to philosophize. This particular lady was unfortunate enough to put her foot in it. In lamenting the tendency of moving pictures of today and in hoping for better times, she made this remark:

"The love affair of a young girl and a young man is not the most important thing in the world."

She's wrong. It is.

It seems to be difficult to so many people to grow old gracefully. Not only do they forget the joys of youth, but they acquire the habit of resenting them. The more they find themselves removed from the activities of youth, the more faults they see in them.

It's love that makes the world go round. It's love that is the starting point of the family upon which civilization rests. Most people marry young. Which is as is should be. "For a few years," said a great philosopher, "Nature dowers young girls with a wealth of beauty, and is lavish in her gift of charm." This is purely physical attraction, dissenters say. True, but love in nine hundred and ninety-nine cases out of a thousand starts from physical attraction. Older ladies would like to change this. Great fortunes have been made in the sale of cosmetics and hair dyes.

The fifty-seven varieties of love are all interesting. None, however, thrills and fascinates us so much as the love between a good-looking young chap and an adorable girl. Because it is natural and fresh and truly romantic and has, besides, the significance of being a contribution to the future generation.

A gentleman of forty-five in love with a lady who has passed her thirty-fifth birthday may interest all people over fifty. But it is hard to get a thrill out of it. A lady after thirty-five may have a wonderful intellect and no end of personal charm. But she has lost her youth.

Any theatrical or moving picture producer who will undertake to specialise in the love affairs of middle-aged people will go broke.

Street Signs

Editor Boston American:

Why is it, with all the talk at City Hall about civic improvement, that street signs in the Hub are the exception instead of the rule? You can walk all over Boston looking for a street and not find it, if you depend on street signs. You may, if you have good vision, find the signs tucked away under an advertising sign or in some other such place.

But why, as a matter of convenience and necessity, does not the city put up some real street signs, so that people can tell one street from another. In New York and other cities it is easy to find the name of the streets you want. Boston claims to be progressive and yet it would take a Sherlock Holmes to find any street signs. Let us have an improvement. J. E. WEBB.

Time to Stop

Editor Boston American:

Since the Civil War the fashion has been "let John Bull carry the freight and Uncle Sam pay the bills." For over half a century we have paid a subsidy to England to handle our overseas business. It's time we kept that subsidy at home.

The only opposition to the upbuilding of an American merchant marine comes from British influence. No American can offer a sane argument against it. Every American boy and girl wants our stars and stripes floating over all the seas. To vote against the subsidy bill is a vote against our merchant marine, against our boys and girls, against the U. S. A. and in favor of England.

People Who Disappear

By Winifred Black

NORFOLK, Va.—not such a big place when you go to look for it on the map. Delightful, old-fashioned, quiet, with an atmosphere all its own—oh, there are people of blood and lineage in Norfolk, let me tell you!

Some of them live in dear, old, shuttered houses, with picket fences around them, and on some walls in Norfolk hang portraits of the great and famous who have long been asleep in the quiet graveyard, within sight of the blue water.

The missing-person bureau at police headquarters in Norfolk has exactly three hundred and seventy-seven names on the list.

What sort of stories are there behind that list, I wonder.

Did you ever know anyone who disappeared?

I have known six persons in my life—and four of them were men and two were women—and every one of them got up one fine morning and "disappeared."

One of the six was a young man, full of life and gay spirits. He had everything in life to live for—youth, health, good looks, a good position, fine prospects—and he left Boston on a lovely Saturday morning to go West and take charge of a good business.

He kissed his mother good-bye and his young brother went to the station with him, saw him on the train and came home, half envious and half proud.

That young man was never seen or heard of again.

The mother spent thousands of dollars, trying to find her son.

She is always hoping and praying—and all this happened nearly twenty years ago.

I knew two middle-aged men, both of whom went downtown to business in the morning—and never came back.

When one of them had been gone ten years, the wife he left behind him got a letter from South America asking where his body should be buried.

When the other had been gone fifteen years, his wife sat down next to him in the theatre in Chicago one rainy afternoon.

He was as surprised to see her as she was to see him.

He said he disappeared because he couldn't bear the way she had of moving her hands, and he didn't like the way she cooked fish.

Wouldn't you like to round out three hundred and seventy-seven people they are looking for at the Missing Persons Bureau in Norfolk, and get them to tell you exactly why they disappeared?

SEEN AND HEARD

NO matter what happens to CHARLES DONAGHEY, one of the elevator group of the Little Building, he is bound to "go up higher." Before coming to America, he was a member of the British Royal Air Squadron and saw a few things in Russia. For his services in the World War he received the British Volunteer Medal, General Service Medal and Russian Service Medal.

For twenty years GEORGE LOW has been a golfer, and during these twenty years GEORGE has often longed to become a member of the "Hole-in-One Club." It was not until recently that GEORGE'S dream became a reality. While playing a foursome he made the fourth hole, a distance of 116 yards, in one stroke.

Women's Educational and Industrial Union occupies quarters on Charles street deserving of special mention. They are in one of the first houses built there, erected by JONATHAN MANN in 1820. It was surrounded by the farm of HARRISON GRAY OTIS, Mayor of Boston in 1829.

A fine Winter is in prospect for both the Twentieth Century Club and the Appalachian Mountain Club on Joy street. EDWARD H. CHANDLER, secretary of the former club, is working hard to get these clubs on their way. Undoubtedly these clubs are the best in the way of social uplift in this city of many fine clubs.

MRS. ANNA HARLOW BIRGE of Canton, who has just returned from Smyrna, after witnessing many atrocities in that city, says she had the time of her life when she gathered up her three children and maid and dodged brigands. It was only the American flag that saved her.

MAYOR CURLEY plans to bid in a world-wide auction sale of some of the rare specimens in the Berlin Zoological Garden which have been put up on the auction block because the German government has insufficient funds for their maintenance.

Said a belated and angry commuter: "The New York & New Haven road's idea of suburban transportation of late is to carry passengers as far as the outer yard of South Terminal and there hold them prisoners longer than it took to make the trip from their respective homes. It's not only confounded annoying, but a distinct hardship on hundreds of girls whose firm docks them for being late."

GARRETT P. SERVISS ON FOURTH DIMENSION

By Garrett P. Serviss

ACCORDING to the philosophy of Einstein, his predecessors and his followers, time must be treated as a "dimension," a "fourth" dimension, in addition to the three familiar dimensions, called up-and-down, right-and-left and forward-and-back, by means of which we denote situation and motion in cubic space.

The point of the new view is that nothing can be completely described without considering its duration as well as its shape and location. The time element cannot be disentangled from the others. The universe is a "space-time continuum." Space and time are not independent, but because time is unseeable while the space dimensions are seeable, directly or indirectly, we are unable to visualize the time dimension coincidently with the others, or in the same manner, and so we think of it as being independent of space. Only mathematics can demonstrate the unity.

Of course, everybody has always known that time, or duration, had to be considered as well as space or extension in all that we do or think of. But we considered it merely in a historical sense and not as a fundamental factor of existence itself. Whether when the new theories are perfected we shall find that this way of looking at time develops important and hitherto unsuspected results time itself alone can tell.

Meanwhile a fresh glint of light is thrown upon the functional importance of the dimension time by a suggestion of David Starr Jordan to the effect that no new species of plant or animal can be developed without a liberal and sufficient time factor being present.

This strikes at the conclusions of some of the experimental or laboratory biologists whose misunderstood remarks recently let loose a small but active whirlwind of opposition—a kind of dust whirl—against the teaching of evolution.

Says Jordan in a letter to Science: "It is often remarked by biologists who have never studied organisms in the field that it is easy to develop forms at will indistinguishable from actual species. To my mind this is one of the most deceptive of the anti-Darwinian heresies. A species is not merely a form or group of individuals distinguished from other groups by definable features. A complete definition involves longevity. A species is a kind of animal or plant which has run the gauntlet of the ages and persisted. * * * Garden and greenhouse products are immensely interesting and instructive, but they throw little light on the origin of species. * * * I have heard this definition of a soldier: 'One that has stood.' It is easy to trick out a group of boys to look like soldiers, but you cannot define them as such until they have 'stood.'"

So, he adds, although a greenhouse variant is easily secured, and with some plants excessive variability is itself a specific character, yet temporary variations have no taxonomic (classificatory) value. "A form is not a species until it has 'stood.'"

Another indication of the profound importance that the dimension time plays in evolution may be discovered in a letter by J. Howard Brown of Princeton. He shows how the opposition to evolutionary teaching is an outgrowth of tradition. Certain unbending minds embrace with all their strength what old teachings have represented as truth, and are unable to accept any variations from such teachings. The scientist, "who is a trained seeker for truth, has to offer a new interpretation of life, a new basis of ethics, which is in opposition to tradition."

But science "holds the key to the situation. The key is evolution itself, the evolutionary interpretation of history, especially the religious and literary history of the Hebrew people. This, rather than biology, would quickly become the storm centre if it were taught in our high schools. It cannot be done at present, but when historical science percolates more thoroughly into the Sunday schools the opposition to the teaching of evolution will dissolve."

OLD SAILOR'S MEDAL RECALLS RESCUE

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 4.—On the left breast of Austin Denham's American sailor uniform, which he wore fifty years ago, hangs a bronze naval Congressional Medal of Honor. On the back of the medal is this inscription:

For extraordinary heroism, to
AUSTIN DENHAM,
Seaman, U. S. S. Kansas,
Near Greytown, Nicaragua,
April 12, 1872.

Reticent and blushing like a lad, Denham, who has white hair and is seventy-three years old, told with reluctance of his heroic act, which won him the coveted medal.

With a group of surveyors aboard, the S. S. Kansas was anchored three miles off Greytown, Nicaragua, prior to the surveyors leaving the ship to chart some dangerous shoals.

Denham—and he blushes as this part of his story—was a prisoner in the brig for having refused to be drilled unmercifully by the captain.

A whaleboat had been launched, with seventeen men in it. A mile and a half from the Kansas the white ocean foam was highest and the "going" tough. Denham heard his "brig mate" shout: "The boat's turned over!" Denham's guard left his post, and Denham followed close on his heels.

A rescue cutter from the Kansas rushed to their aid, but overturned when it reached the helpless men.

The skipper called for volunteers to fill a second rescue boat. Denham offered his services, but was ordered back to the brig. Soon a wail was heard on deck—the second cutter had met the same fate as the first.

A "brig guard" stuck his head in the doorway and told him the captain said he would accept Denham's services.

"I'll go," Denham replied, "but the captain will have to ask me himself."

That the captain did, and a catamaran—a five-foot raft, with rubber pontoons—was lowered.

The breakers hit the catamaran, too, and threw Denham from it. Then, as another breaker rolled toward him, Denham saw a shark! Somehow he managed to recover his catamaran and start for the helpless souls.

Eight of the unfortunates were never seen, but that night when roll was called fourteen men reported:

"Denham brought me in!"

When Denham again went aboard the Kansas he reported to the captain that he was ready to return to the brig. The captain asked Denham down to his cabin.
